CONFERS WITH CABINET HEADS IN WASHINGTON

Returns To Capital Before Going To Canada For Vital Parleys.

CALLS IN HULL AND KNOX

British and American Staff Chiefs Continue Work on Military Strategy.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt summoned high-ranking cabinet members to the White House today presumably for a quick review of the war picture before going to Quebec for his final conference with Prime Minister Churchill.

Conferring with the president were Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, and Postmaster General Frank Walker. There have been reports that Hull will accompany Mr. Roosevelt to the Quebec conference and it was assumed that Knox brought the president up to date on recent naval developments.

The president was back in Washington after three days of preliminary conferences with Churchill.

The chief executive chose his Hyde Park, N. Y., estate for a quiet, entirely uninterrupted visit with the British prime minister.

In the pastoral quietude of his Hudson river valley farm, the president and Mr. Churchill relaxed and talked freely and easily together on the high war strategy plans for a victory in Europe at the earliest possible time.

The president and British prime minister were able to cover the whole field of the war—Europe, the Mediterranean and the Far East—without the intrusion of any outside affairs, domestic or otherwise.

This week, both leaders will sit down together again in Quebec for the final stage of the conference with the combined American and British chiefs of staff.

Mr Churchill returned to Quebec over the week-end.

Meanwhile, the combined Anglo-American military chiefs have been holding secret sessions in the Canadian city, drawing the master blueprint for the American War Correspondent Told Nazis Starved and Shot Prisoners.

OREL, Soviet Russia, Aug. 15 — (Delayed) — (AP) — Under a pale moon shining over a wall of the Orel prison, Allied correspondents witnessed one of the most gruesome sights of this war in the opening of a mass grave where Soviet authorities said the Germans had cast about 5,000 bodies of their Russian victims.

These authorities, conducting a careful investigation of this and other evidences of the Germans in Orel, said most of the victims were Red army men who died of starvation while being kept in the grim, two-story, red brick prison or were shot in the back of the head behind the white-washed prison wall.

No agreement exists between the Soviet Union and Germany like the Geneva convention on the treatment of prisoners of war, but Soviet authorities indicated a belief that the German conduct violated even the natural, unwritten laws of humaneness.

Although there have been numerous charges of German atrocities during the war, this

Biggest Week-End Gas Buying Rush Jams Stations In City

Mansfield gasoline station attendants were taking things easy today after the biggest buying rush since gasoline rationing went into effect kept them busy over the week-end.

Motorists jammed station lots to fill their gasoline tanks before ration coupon values dropped from four to three gallons.

Attendants were kept busy Saturday and Sunday by motorists "Fill 'er up" orders. Long lines of automobiles formed at some of the stations yesterday, waiting to use their four-gallon coupons before the cut at midnight last night.

The rush was general throughout the state and midwest section. The state highway patrol reported a similar pickup in Sunday traffic. The patrol theorized that motorists were having a final "fling" before settling down to more conservative driving.

Several cities reported that the week-end splurge more than doubled gasoline sales. Other stations were completely sold out long before midnight.

Office of price administration inspectors and investigators were checking filling stations today in an effort to prevent unscrupulous dealers from padding their inventories by substituting three-gallon coupons for four-gallon coupons.

35 Quit Political Posts In Highway Patronage 'Expose'

Following disclosure last week that the state highway department in Cuyahoga county was being used by the state administration for political purposes, the Cleveland Press today had reported that 35 employes and officials of the highway department had resigned as Republican ward leaders and precinct committeemen.

The mass "political abdication," the newspaper said, started last Tuesday and was still continuing today.

The Press charged that the state machine of Gov. John W. Bricker and the county machine of Congressman George H. Bender, chairman of the Cuyahoga county Republican central committee, had combined to turn the highway department in the Cleveland area into an organized, systematic political patronage establishment.

The resignations, the paper said, were a sharp rebuttal of Gov. Bricker's denial that the Cuyahoga county highway department is filled with Republican job holders or that it is being used for political purposes.

It was charged last week by the Press that 82 highway employes in the county also held political offices in the Republican party contrary to state civil service laws.

Meanwhile, it was reported that Cuyahoga county Prosecutor Frank T. Cullitan had begun an investigation into the highway situation, and has said that appropriate action would be taken should the facts warrant.

Cullitan was also quoted as saying his office would investigate Congressman Bender's alleged use of highway employes to further personal private enterprises.

The Press accused the congressman of using the full time services of highway workers to help get out his personal newspaper, the National Republican.

ILL LUCK STAYS WITH FAMILY

Daughter-In-Law in Orlo Rush Family Injured In Latest of Accident Series.

Fate continued to frown on the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Orlo J. Rush yesterday when a daughter-in-law of the two automobile crash victims was thrown from a motorcycle after it had collided with a car at Lexington avenue and Mendota street.

Suffering lacerations to the left leg and cuts and bruises Mrs. Wayne Rush, 24, was the fourth member of the "jinx" family to be injured in a traffic accident since July 30.

Her parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Rush met death July 30 when the car in which they were riding collided head-on with another auto on U. S. Route 30. Elsie Milliron, 18, was also killed in the crash.

Two weeks later a car owned by Orie Rush, 18, son of the crash victims, and driven by Melvin Coulter, Perrysville R. D. 2, sideswiped a bus on U. S. Route 30 and collided with another car. Rush escaped serious injury, but Coulter's left arm had to be amputated after it had been badly mangled.

Twenty years ago, on the same U. S. Route 30, Mr. and Mrs. Rush's sons were killed when they were struck by an automobile while they were riding bicycles.

In the accident in which Mrs. Wayne Rush was injured yesterday the driver of the motorcycle, Paul Farst, 31, of 197 Chilton ave-

RAVAGING CROPS

Guerrillas Ruin Wheat to Keep It From German Army.

ISTANBUL — (Delayed) — (AP) - Yugoslav guerillas, rallying to the battle cry "Not one grain of wheat for the Germans," are waging an intensive campaign to sabotage the harvest and communications in Serbia, Montenegro and parts of Bosnia and Albania, reports from the Balkans said today.

Advices from the Balkans declared the Germans were trying to create a new Croat army of 100,000 men to replace Italian forces along the Dalmatian coast and are endeavoring to combat guerilla activities by forced labor decrees, with death the penalty for non-compliance.

Fires in wheat fields and collisions between Nazi supply trains were reported increasing in Yugoslavia.

RICHLAND DADS BEGIN SHIFT TO WAR JOBS

PLANTS HAVE POSTS OPEN

Handley Says Industries In Mansfield Can Take All Wanting To Transfer.

Told by the War Manpower commission that they must take war jobs or fight, Richland county fathers had started a move today to enlist in the growing industrial army at home.

C. W. Handley, manager of the Mansfield office of the U. S. employment service, said there was an increase this morning in the number of fathers who want essential jobs to make them draft deferrable.

"We expect the number of fathers who are applying for war jobs to increase within the next few days, and Mansfield industries can use all of them," Handley said.

The government has set Oct. 1 as the deadline for shifting to essential jobs in the industrial machine, but there were indications in most cities that fathers are not going to wait that long.

Employment centers in New York and Boston were swamped today with job applicants, most of them fathers under 38 years old, and the employment offices were told to stay open longer to handle the rush.

In a sweeping move to provide an adequate labor supply, the war manpower commission broadened the list of "non-deferrable" occupations, made it more difficult for men in essential jobs to shift to others for higher pay, and told men under 38 that they must take war jobs or face induction into the military forces regardless of their family status.

Industrial employment is nearing a record high in Mansfield, and Handley said Saturday that women will have to fill the vacancies in war plants unless more men are made available for jobs.

Although draft boards are expected to continue giving due consideration to hardships that would be caused by induction of men with dependents, after Oct. 1 the main question will be whether the physically fit can serve their country better in the armed forces or

Radio Equipment For Police Cars Strikes New Snag

Police Chief Meade K. Bates thought last week that he was ready to order new radio equipment for his police department, but he wasn't so sure of it today.

For the second time today, city officials had agreed to let the contract, each time to a different firm, and then the entire matter was left open while the city further investigates one of the bids.

Bates was told last Thursday that the contract would be let to the Fred M. Link company of New York, the higher of two bidders, and he filed his application for a priority with the War Production board, listing that firm as the contractor.

Not satisfied with the bid, Mayor W. J. Locke learned that the sec-

Allies Overrun Last Defenses Of Fleeing Axis

Messina Under American Artillery Fire; Escape Route Under Land, Sea And Air Attack; Germans Leave Italians To Hold On.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—The Vichy radio announced that Allied planes had attacked Paris this morning for half an hour.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—United States troops were overrunning the Axis rear guard today in the vicinity of Milazzo, 14 miles west of Messina, and it was officially stated that the end of the Sicilian campaign "is now at hand."

The Americans, pushing up between 12 and 15 miles, advanced well beyond Barcellona to within heavy artillery range on Messina and it was assumed that this main escape hatch was already under ground fire as well as aerial bombardment.

Barcellona lies six miles south-southwest of Milazzo and 16 miles west of Messina.

All indications are the Nazis have pulled out even their delaying parties and left Italian units to face the climactic British and American push.

The U. S. Seventh army and the British Eighth army raced forward as rapidly as blown-up roads and diminishing resistance permitted. The campaign still was less than six weeks old.

The British captured Taormina, strategic harbor and road junction on the east coast 28 miles by road from Messina, Catiglione, eight miles inland; and the town of Kaggi.

(Admitting that Axis forces are quitting Sicily, the Berlin radio declared nevertheless, in a broadcast recorded by NBC, that the Messina strait was heavily guarded and firmly in German hands." Anglo-American attempts to stop the ferrying service (to the Italian mainland) will be futile," it said.)

The thrust through Barcellona essentially isolated both Milazzo and the sandy cape bearing its name.

Forward elements of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth army were less than 25 miles from Messina.

The joint British and American line running through central Sicily was slightly farther away, but was advancing at about the same rate as the Allied forces on the flanks.

In the usual sense, the Sicilian "front" no longer exists.

However a ring of strongpoints has been formed about the outskirts of Messina, aerial reconnaissance showed.

Official dispatches said numbers of Germans donned civilian clothing and attempted to infiltrate American lines to reach the rear area. Many were captured.

Military booty now in American hands includes 293 75-millimeter guns as well as some larger artillery pieces and 188 tanks.

American Seventh army units pressed forward in the central sector east of Randazzo, the communique said.

A rapid American thrust to the neighborhood of Milazzo, on a promontory about 14 miles west of Messina, has denied "the enemy the use of this important evacuation port," the bulletin declared.

"Contact has been light throughout the day," the announcement added.

(Axis fighters were declared in the Rome communique to have intercepted numerous air formations over Messina strait and shot down five Spitfires and three Curtiss fighters.

(Torpedo planes were said to have sunk two Allied steamers of

TOLL: Yanks Bring Down 48 Jap Planes In Pacific Clash

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—Allied warplanes, displaying in the protection of their ground forces a vigilance equal to the zeal with which they carried the attack to the enemy, shot down 48 Japanese aircraft—23 of them bombers—over the southwest Pacific battlefront yesterday. This success reported in today's communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters, was achieved at a cost of only five Allied planes and no more than three pilots. The ratio of nearly 10 to 1 bettered by far the all-over score of approximately 4 to 1 established in the six weeks since the start of the Allies' new Pacific offensive.

In a week-end of almost ceaseless activity, the air forces under MacArthur's command also:

Attacked without loss the great Japanese-held oil port of Balikpapan on the east coast of Borneo, flying a record round trip of more than 2,500 miles to set huge fires among the refineries, reservoirs and tank ships.

THREAT: Russians Drive On Bryansk As Karachev Falls

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW—Four Red army divisions pushed ahead from the captured German bastion of Karachev on the 26-mile road to Bryansk today after severing the last main line of escape for Nazi troops trapped in the Orel salient.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda said the Soviet forces were cutting through dense forests, hastening to prevent the Germans from organizing adequate defenses lines on the Desna river.

Karachev fell, Pravda said, when four Russian divisions stormed strong Nazi fortifications on the hills commanding the approaches to the city and pursued the fleeing Nazis into the streets of the burning town.

Occupation of Karachev closed the main line of escape for Germans remaining in the Orel salient following the Russians' lightning drive westward.

The size of the enemy force encircled could not be estimated immediately but earlier dispatches indicated the Germans failed to retire a large number of men and war machines from the Orel front before the base at Karachev was cut off.

Tass reported the battle for Kharkov had reached a climax.

The Germans were said to be throwing troops into the battle as soon as they could reach the front and resistance was increasing.

Karachev lies on the brink of an immense forest covering Bryansk from the east.

The Germans had based all their counter-offensives in the Bryansk sector from the vital rail junction of Karachev and intended to hold off the Red army here long enough to erect impregnable fortifications along the Desna river.

Soviet troops which were hindered by bad weather advanced over muddy forest roads often forced to fell trees over swamps in their path.

HOUR OF GRACE + + +

CHAPTER XXVIII

She did not go to see Clare until Monday morning.

The whole of Sunday was spent with her mother hoping that her presence would alleviate any sadness her mother might feel at Toby's absence. The telephone rang constantly through that Sunday morning, for there had been an announcement in the paper of the marriage.

Elinor McLean seemed not to tire of telling her friends of the simply lovely wedding, of Erica and of Toby's job. Meegan knew that as long as her mother could live on the excitement of the wedding and the attention she was receiving as a result of it she would feel neither sadness nor loss.

It was unlike Adele not to call since Meegan was certain that Adele not only read the paper carefully but also listened to the gossip around the club house. And certainly Toby's marriage to the unknown and pretty girl stimulated talk. So, during one of the few moments when the telephone was silent, she called Adele and was told by the clerk that Miss Carlson was away for the week-end. He was sorry but he could not tell her where Miss Carlson had gone. Not for as long as Meegan could remember had Adele spent the Labor day week-end anywhere except on the island.

After a noonday dinner on Sunday Meegan suggested a swim, knowing that while her mother did not go in the water she nevertheless liked to put on a pretty bathing suit, sit under an umbrella and talk with passing people.

Customarily the beach was more crowded on this particular Sunday than on any other Sunday of the season. When Meegan, emerging from a swim, joined her mother she heard her say to a woman friend who had stopped, "I thought I'd see Clare on the beach this afternoon. I've seen so little of her this summer. But then the summer has gone so quickly. She came to tea one afternoon. Do you know I haven't met her husband? I was so anxious to meet him again, too. The summer is almost over and I haven't seen half the people I planned to see. One never does somehow."

"I don't believe Captain Christopher is down this week-end," Mrs. Fenwick replied. She was a tall, dark, dour person in a dark bathing suit that made her look like a spider. "I'm rather certain of that because Charles, my son, is working in Washington and he's been coming down week-ends with Captain Christopher. It worked out beautifully for him But last week-end Charles called and said that Captain Christopher was out of town for a couple of weeks and couldn't bring him. That's why Charles didn't come down either last week-end or this. I told him he was spoiled and wouldn't be inconvenienced by public transportation. I'm afraid we're all going to accustom ourselves to public transportation in spite of the discomforts."

"Do you really think so?" Elinor McLean asked sweetly "Really, I think the war will be over in the spring Hitler will have exhausted himself and then we'll all get back to normal living."

Mrs. Fenwick smiled sourly. "I wish I could believe it was as simple as that. When and if Hitler exhausted himself, it will be a long time before we get back to normal. This is a social upheaval as well."

When she left Elinor McLean asked, "Isn't she pessimistic, dear? You know perfectly well when Hitler is finished, we shall have peace. He's the only person we have to worry about. But what puzzles me is why he hasn't been assassinated . . . I don't approve of the new bathing suits the girls are wearing, the ones with shorts and bra . . . like the one Nancy Pendleton is wearing over there. She's much too large a girl to wear a suit like that."

Fayne was not on the island this week-end, Meegan was thinking. And since it was unlikely that he would be here tomorrow, Monday, she would go to see Clare tomorrow morning before she took the children to the beach. But why was she going? What was the point in going? Only Toby had said he wanted her to go. There was a reason he wanted her to go . . . She would go to see Clare for the last time.

Elinor McLean enjoyed nothing more than to receive guests. That afternoon it was as if she were receiving guests for hours. Meegan had often wondered at her mother's popularity both with young people and her contemporaries. But Elinor McLean liked people of all ages. She liked people of all ages. She liked people in general. She was sweet and pretty and unfailingly pleasant and sympathetic. There was an air about her that living was a very pleasant business in a world where all people had softly waved hair and soft hands and clear eyes and fresh clothing. And her optimism was infectious. She could neither feel nor think deeply but her optimism was a drug to those who had not lost as much as she and who complained more.

"It's been a perfect day," she said to Meegan as they got into the car to go home. "But, dear, shall we drive by Clare's?"

"Clare's?" Meegan asked, her voice rising. "Why, Mother?"

"Oh, I suppose it's silly but I wondered if she were having a party this week-end. I thought we'd ride by the house and see. Isn't it curious that she hasn't entertained more this summer? I thought she would have a great many parties and invite you and you would make new friends. Clare and her husband are so distinguished . . ."

"And you want to ride by her house and see if she's having a party to which I wasn't invited?"

"Yes, dear. Just for a moment. It isn't far out of our way . . . I wonder what she and her husband will give Erica and Toby for a wedding present. Something lovely, I'm sure."

"Yes, something lovely, I'm sure."

"But of course, dear. They can afford to be lavish."

Meegan pressed her foot upon the accelerator. As the white house came into view she lifted her foot, thus permitting the car to pass the house slowly . . . There was no sign of life about the grounds or on any of the encircling porches. The grass was high and the rose beds had been neglected. The high wind of several nights ago had ripped one green awning above a window on the second floor Had not all of the windows been open and Clare's car parked in the garage (the garage doors were open) the place would have looked as if no one inhabited it. Even in the bright afternoon sun the tall grass and the neglected roses and the flapping torn awning gave it the forlorn look of a house in which no one lived.

Elinor McLean looked very disappointed. "Why, there's no one there! Oh, dear, they haven't kept the place up very well, have they? Surely they have a gardener . . ."

"Yes," Meegan said, frowning. "I've seen him working there. A polite colored man who always waved when I went by . . ."

"But Clare is home. Her car is here. Beautiful car, isn't it?"

"And all of the windows are open," Meegan said. She tried to drive away the uneasy feeling that all was not well within the house as she turned the car toward home. "Clare is probably on someone's boat this afternoon."

"Then we won't go in. Of course if I thought she was alone, then it would be a good time to call. Remind me to do it next week. I'd rather go when her husband is there but I don't want to make it seem too obvious that I arranged it like that. Good heavens, isn't that absurd? Why shouldn't I go when he is there? I want to meet him." Looking ahead, she said, "I wonder where Erica and Toby are this afternoon. Bless them. I think your father would have liked Erica, don't you, dear?"

"I'm sure of that." Sue's house was closed tightly, she saw Then Van had gone, too . . .

"I miss him terribly. But when we go back to town we'll see a lot of them. I have been brave, haven't I?"

"You've been splendid"

"I haven't tried to be brave. Really, I think if I tried, I wouldn't be at all. Somehow it seems perfectly natural for Toby to marry Erica. Perhaps I don't mind because I'm the only one of my friends who isn't a grandmother. For years I've had to listen to their baby talk. I do hope Erica and Toby won't wait years to have a baby. You know, it's embarrassing to a woman not to be a grandmother within a reasonable length of time. She has to make excuses and apologize for the fact that her children don't make her a grandmother . . . It just occurred to me that I don't believe we have anything in for supper."

"We'll find something. I'm not hungry."

"We have cheese. You could grill some cheese. You do it so well."

* * *

That evening she spent with her mother. About eleven they went upstairs together, said an affectionate good night and Meegan closed the door of her room behind her. And before she switched on the lamp beside her bed she went to the window and parted the curtains and looked for the lights in Clare's house. . . . There were none The house was dark. And, for Clare to go away and leave her car in the garage and all the windows in the house open, knowing the storms were sudden and frequent and severe . . . And if Miss Willoughby were there, she would have a light. And even if both Clare and Miss Willoughby were away, the servants who lived on the third floor of the house would have lights burning But there were no lights . . . The particular place in the familiar landscape that she had identified as Clare's house was as a black patch over a dead eye . . .

ALLIED VICTORY 'AT HAND' OVER SICILIAN ENEMY

Germans Rush To Get Off Isle To Mainland, Bombarded From, Air, Sea, Land.

12,000 tons and blown up a medium-sized merchantman in the western Mediterranean.

(Italian motor torpedo boats sank a British light cruiser yesterday off Cape Spartivento, the communique said.)

Official announcements and front line reports indicated the end definitely was in sight.

Headquarters said yesterday American forces tearing along the north coast had sped 14 miles and captured Oliveri, only 27½ miles from Messina.

Significantly, the Allied air forces have shifted their destruction from Sicily to Axis disembarkation points on the Italian mainland and the crowded evacuation beaches.

One front line dispatch said the Axis was pulling small craft into the very narrowest section of the Messina strait at Torre Di Faro on the very tip of the island. From there the crossing to the mainland can be made in 20 minutes.

Air Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham said at a press conference the German air force "has been knocked out of the skies as far as we are concerned" and the northwest Africa tactical air force was able to give ground forces maximum help.

Allied warships, also striking at the fleeing enemy, bombarded the Italian mainland port of Vibo Valentia, an escape outlet on the south side of the Gulf of Eufemia.

Coningham said months of perfect weather had enabled the Allied air arm to give strong support to the ground forces and that another month of such weather could be expected.

He cautioned, however, that "what has been done here in the air cannot be done in Europe" where, he said, the ground can be seen from 6,000 feet on only two or three days out of five.

Coningham expressed admiration for the American air forces, both those under his tactical command and the great fleet of Fortresses operating in the strategic air force under Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle.

"There is no doubt the Fortress weapon is an absolute killer," he said. "Nobody forsaw the terrific effect of Fortress raids. Certainly we didn't, and I am confident the Germans didn't."

Milan and Berlin Bombed By British

BULLETIN

LONDON —(AP)— There was no let-up in the air assault against Hitler Europe this morning as great formations of heavy Allied daylight bombers roared across the Channel for two hours under strong fighter escort. Later in the day medium bombers and fighters took up the attack.

LONDON—(AP)—British heavy bombers made another attack on industrial objectives of Milan last night and RAF Mosquitoes bombed Berlin, the air ministry announced today.

The attack on Milan, hit twice previously since early Friday morning, was made in the bright light of a full moon.

The air ministry said a number of enemy fighters were encountered on the route to the northern industrial center and at least two were destroyed.

"Mosquitoes bombed targets at Berlin and other aircraft were engaged in extensive minelaying in enemy waters," the communique said. Mosquitoes also hit Berlin Saturday night.

The air ministry, without saying whether heavy craft or Mosquitoes or both were meant, said 10 bombers failed to return and two fighters were missing from last night's operations.

The new RAF blow sustained a steady British-American air offensive that included raids Saturday night on Milan and Berlin, on the Axis airfield at St. Omer, France, in daylight yesterday, and on six enemy airdromes in France and Holland at dusk.

Strong forces of Flying Fortresses, roaring across the channel at the latest hour they ever have raided Europe, blasted the six airfields, officially described by the U. S. Eighth Air Force as "Germany's most important operational fighter airdromes in western Europe." American Marauders hit St. Omer.

Brand 'Open City' Move as Trick

LONDON (AP)—Belief that the Italian declaration of Rome as an 'open city' was merely a trick by Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio to spare it from further bombardment appeared to be growing in Great Britain today and Lord Beaverbrook's London Daily Express bluntly demanded that Allied air attacks be continued until Italy quits the war.

There has been no official comment in London on the Italian declaration and none was anticipated in the absence of Prime Minister Winston Churchill in Canada. The Rome radio itself warned Italians that they could expect security from bombs only after the Italian declaration is officially accepted by the Allies.

British suspicion that Badoglio's declaration was nothing but a ruse was founded upon the fact that if the Italians fulfilled the requirements necessary to make Rome truly an open city any defense of southern and central Italy would be virtually impossible.

All railroad lines on the west side of Italy run through Rome and without them the forces to the south could not be supplied nor could Axis forces now retreating from Sicily be moved north of the capital.

Milan Workers Again Demand End of War

CHIASSO, On The Swiss-Italian Frontier —(AP)—Milan workers marched through the burning ruins of that once-great industrial city in a new demonstration for peace early today, telephoned reports to the frontier here said.

These reports added that the demonstration began about five hours after the end of the latest RAF raid on the city.

Disregarding armed guards thrown about the still burning and smoking areas, the demonstrators picked their way through the rubble in the streets, raised cries that the war should be ended and shouted against those who caused it, the reports added.

The debris in the streets of the city was said to be 15 to 30 feet high. Milan has virtually ceased to exist as a city, said persons arriving at the frontier.

These travelers asserted two towers of the cathedral had collapsed. The Sorresco palace was destroyed and the royal palace damaged. In the heavily-attacked Scala Farina freight yards, rails stuck up like uprooted trees.

Action Expected Soon In North Pacific

WASHINGTON—(INS)—Startling new developments in the Pacific war today were expected momentarily following American and United Nations successes in the south and southwest Pacific.

The ominous lull in news from the north Pacific was carried into the third week and speculation continued on whether American forces would invade Japanese-held Kiska in time to crush the enemy before bad weather sets in.

The lack of news from the North Pacific raised the possibility that American forces were awaiting clear weather before they struck another smashing sea-air blow against the Japanese on Kiska.

There has been no news from that war zone since American warships on July 30 bombarded Japanese coastal defenses and installations on that island.

Since that time Secretary of War Stimson stated that American air blows at Kiska were continuing whenever weather permitted.

U. S. Bombers Blast Japs In Bay of Bengal

NEW DELHI — (AP) — Heavy bombers of the U. S. Tenth Air Force attacked Japanese installations yesterday on Chetham island in the Andaman group in the Bay of Bengal some 550 miles off the Burmese coast, a United States communique announced today.

Direct hits were scored on warehouses and other buildings causing large fires, the announcement said. All aircraft returned safely.

Allied military steps in both Europe and the Far East for the next several months.

The most immediate problem before the United Nations is the opening of a second front on the continent of Europe itself, a step which Soviet Russia has made plain can mean only a landing in major force in western Europe where a third or half of Germany's tremendous land army strength would be engaged.

Plans for just such a landing are expected to emerge from the Quebec conference.

'Most Important' Week Under Way

BULLETIN

QUEBEC—(U.P.)—The fate of Rome will be decided by Wednesday, it was believed in Quebec conference circles today. The chief of staff of the United States and Britain were understood to have decided not to accept the Italian declaration that Rome has been declared an open city, unless Marshal Pietro Badoglio accepts the Allies' unconditional surrender demand.

QUEBEC, Que —(INS)— The return to Quebec of British Prime Minister Churchill and the presence of the joint general military staffs here today spelled the beginning of what may well be the most important week of World War II.

Great Britain and the United States stood on the threshhold of military and international political decisions designed to carry the war nearer a victorious conclusion, and at the same time assure reoccupied peoples of their right to select their own form of free government.

Within the past two days, it has become increasingly apparent here that the forthcoming conversations between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill will be of more lasting significance than the famed Casablanca talks of last January.

Further, observers are of the opinion that the conference will be more gravely concerned with political potentialities than have any of the previous five meetings between the leaders of the two English speaking Allied leaders.

International aspects of the talk were brought to the forefront by confirmed reports that British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden would make his appearance at the conferences, and speculation that one of the highest United States diplomatic officers also would be present.

ond bidder, Galvin Manufacturing company of Chicago, could furnish the equipment and pay for installation for about $200 less.

This morning, it was agreed to give the contract to the Chicago firm at $4,237, but a little later Bates learned that the firm may not be licensed to sell the city the kind of equipment Bates wants. So Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff said the matter would be "thrashed out later."

The confusion apparently grew out of the Chicago firm's bid which did not state clearly, Bates said, that the installation cost was included in the bid and that the city would be protected from any court action which might result from infringement on patent rights.

was the first evidence laid open to American, British and other Allied correspondents in Russia.

They drove through two layers of barbed wire into a field behind the prison, surrounded by a white birch fence, where medical specialists of a special state commission investigating German atrocities were already at work.

Part of a long ditch under the fence was open, exposing a heap of bodies looking more like burlap bags than the remains of human beings. The bodies were placed one by one on a wooden table for study to determine the cause of death.

Over the scene hung the rank odor of decay. It was strong enough to sicken some of the witnesses and Lt. Gen. Nikolai Burdenko, chief surgeon of the Red army heading the investigation, was confined to his quarters by illness.

Prof. Dmitry Boropaev, assistant to Burdenko, wearing a white robe over a Red army uniform conducted the examination with five other doctors.

He said about 300 of the total of 5,000 bodies were exhumed and the work was in the preliminary stage. The prisoners of war were lightly dressed and some had been shot.

A skull had been placed on the table showing two holes where a bullet had entered back of the head and passed through the forehead.

So far no documents were found to establish the identity of any of the victims, but most of them wore the clothing of Red army men.

The main ditch was 100 yards long, six feet wide and ten feet deep with the dead in layers of five. There were seven smaller trenches not yet opened.

Authorities said they were informed by prisoners who had survived that the Germans carried out executions twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays in groups up to 20 men.

They said the men were marched individually to a wall followed by a single executioner who pushed the victim to the ground and shot him in the back of the head.

ager of the OPA, told the nation in a broadcast last night that the question of extending reduced rations throughout the country was being studied by Interior Secretary Ickes.

It is expected that approximately 50,000 barrels a day may be diverted to the east, Bowles said, and if all goes well the basic ration in the east may be increased in September from one and a half gallons a week to two gallons.

Rep. Edward Rowe (R.), today denounced the gas slash as unnecessary as "side pockets in a pig." Rowe believes that the reductions will not help motorists in the east and will cause "great hardships" in the midwest.

He said that congress should be recalled and strip OPA officials and Petroleum Administrator Ickes of some of their power.

RICHLAND DADS BEGIN SHIFT TO WAR JOBS

Start Registering Early In View of Oct. 1 Deadline To Get Draft Deferment.

in war production and in support of the war effort.

WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt said the program had three objectives to hold essential workers on war-useful jobs, to assure transfer of workers to jobs aiding the war effort, and to supply men needed for the armed forces without cutting war production.

To that end, these steps were ordered:

A list of 149 "critical occupations" was announced. Persons employed in them gain super-eligibility for deferment from induction.

Draft boards were instructed to give greater consideration than ever to occupational deferments.

Twenty-three additional activities, 27 specific job-occupations, were added to the non-deferrable list. Registrants, even fathers, who remain in such occupations become subject to reclassification unless it can be shown their induction would cause extreme hardship to their dependents. (Fathers as a class become subject to induction after Oct. 1.).

New standards were established governing transfer of civilian workers from pob to job with the aim of facilitating transfers from less essential to more essential war jobs.

In announcing the new regulations Saturday night, McNutt said:

"The time has come when every worker must justify himself in terms of his contribution to the war effort. . . .

"The necessary allocation of additional men with critical skills to war jobs and the failure of many thousands of men in critical labor shortage areas to transfer to war work have placed practical limits on our ability to fill military calls with safety to the war production program."

The "super deferment list ranged from aircraft engine mechanic to x-ray equipment service man, and for the most part consists of high-skilled or supervisory occupations. It includes such positions as locomotive engineer, die maker, diesel mechanic, all-around machinists, all-around underground miners and tool designers.

Additions to the non-deferable list included all jobs in manufacture of alcoholic or soft drinks, amusement machines and novelties, and all jobs incident to operation of race tracks, pool halls, ticket agencies, and so on, and wholsaling or retailing of games, toys, musical instruments and soft drinks.

In addition, the non-deferrable list takes in, without regard to the type of business in which they are held, such jobs as sales clerks, ticket takers, literary agents, window trimmers, sign painters and sightseeing guides.

POWER DENIES BLOCKING BILL

Calls Metzenbaum Charge on Care of Defectives 'Too Ridiculous' for Comment.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Don Power, Gov. John W. Bricker's secretary, today described as "too ridiculous to warrent comment" an assertion that he blocked passage in the legislature of a bill providing additional accommodations for mental defectives.

The charge was made by former State Sen. James Metzenbaum, Cuyahoga county Democrat, in a signed story in Sunday's Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"The facts are," Power said, "the administration tried on numerous occasions to get a bill in constitutional form so it could be enacted."

Metzenbaum wrote that senate and house committees and Governor Bricker expressed approval of a measure he sponsored in 1940, but Power "caused the bill to be chocked in the rules committee of the house, so that it perished even after it had received the unanimous vote of every committee in the house and senate."

Metzenbzaum's letter was printed in connection with stories on the slaying last week-end of James and Charles Collins, 13-year-old twins. Henry Hagert, charged with first degree murder in the deaths, was released only a week ago from City hospital after treatment in a psycnopathic ward.

Washington for federal backing for the highway relocation, Mayor Locke believes.

With no state highway funds available immediately for changing the route of the highway, the relocation could be a serious stumbling block for the city in pushing the project to completion.

It is the responsibility of the city to see that the highway work is done in time to permit the Civil Aeronautics authority to start work on the airport early in 1944 after the city has acquired 1,000 acres of land necessary for the expansion.

Because the Mansfield project is one of the few in the state for which it will be necessary to move a main highway, the state department told city officials that it has no fund to finance the work.

Navy Announces Name Given To New Aircraft Carrier.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The navy officially announced today that the name—the U. S. Shangri-La—has been assigned to a new aircraft carrier under construction at the Portsmouth, Va., navy yard.

The name originated at the time Maj. Gen. James Doolittle and his fliers raided Tokyo in April, 1942. Although the flyers took off from a carrier, the fact was not disclosed for almost a year after the assault.

When questioned about the place from which the twin-engined bombers took off, President Roosevelt at the time said the fliers came from "Shangri-La."

FORMAL CEREMONY AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Miss Thora Ruckman Becomes Bride of Carl Laubscher, jr., Sunday Afternoon At 3:30 O'clock; Reception At Colonial Guest House.

BEAUTIFUL appointments combined to make memorable the wedding yesterday of Miss Thora Maxine Ruckman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Ruckman, 200 Gerke avenue, and Carl William Laubscher, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Laubscher, sr., Park avenue west road. Nuptial vows were exchanged before the palm-banked altar of the St. John's vangelical and Reformed church. Rev. Paul H. Saleste officiated for the service at 3:30 o'clock read in the presence of relatives and friends.

Ferns and palms formed a pretty background for the two large beauty baskets of gladoli in the pastel shades. Two seven branch candelabra illuminated the scene.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. Helen Heston, whose selections were "Liebstraum," "O Promise Me," "Intermezzo," "Indian Love Call" and "Evening Star." The soloist was Miss Wanda Hess, who sang "Because" and "At Dawning." The wedding marches were played by Mrs. Heston.

Approaching the altar on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, Miss Ruchman wore a Duchess slipper satin gown of off-white. The very full skirt with its extremely long train was attached to a low waisted bodice. Sheer marquisette formed the yoke with its high round neckline. Lace trimmed the yoke giving an overshoulder effect and also trimmed the long tight sleeves which came to points over the hand. She wore a fingertip length illusion veil which was held in place by orange blossoms. Her only jewelry was a pink sapphire necklace, worn by the bridegroom's mother on her wedding day.

Attendants for the bride were Miss Jacqueline Weigler, maid of honor, Misses Eleanor and Eloise Piper, bridesmaids. Their frocks were fashioned alike, made of marquisette over taffeta. The formal dresses had yokes edged in Chantilly lace and the same trimming repeated at the edge of the low waistline and below the elbow sleeves. The bridesmaids were dressed in Empress blue and the maid of honor wore Picardy. Completing their ensembles were Juliet type caps edged with Chantilly lace which matched the dresses. They wore double strands of pearls, gifts from the bride.

The bride's flowers were white roses combined with white gladoli and swansonia. Miss Weigler carried a bouquet of Picardy glads, purple asters and swansonia, and the Misses Piper's flowers were Picardy glads, lavender asters and swansonia.

Mrs. Ruckman chose a powder blue frock with white accessories for her daughter's wedding. She wore a corsage of pink roses and blue delphinium. Mrs. Laubscher's dress was of coffee brown with powder blue and brown accessories. Her corsage was of Talisman roses and blue delphinium.

Ushers escorting the guests to their seats were Henry Hager, Robert Saltzgaber and Donald Zelenka. James Elliot was best man for Mr. Laubscher.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Colonial Guest House for 75 guests. Later the newlyweds left for a trip through northern Ohio. For traveling the new Mrs. Laubscher wore a brown two piece dress with turf accessories. Her corsage was of gardenias and yellow roses.

Upon their return they will reside at 599 Heineman boulevard. The bride was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school and has been employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. Mr. Laubscher, a graduate of Ontario high school, is a jeweler.

Out-of-town guests in attendance were Mrs. R. J. Fox and son, Dayton; Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Garrett, Shiloh; Mr. and Mrs. Fay Ruckman, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Fetters, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ruckman, all of Plymouth and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Clark and daughter, Roslyn of Shelby.

ETHEL MAE BOGAN TO WED CPL. GENE CUSIC

Announcement Made Saturday Evening At Party Given By Bride-to-Be's Mother, Mrs. R. B. Bogan, for 24 Guests.

AT A LOVELY party given by Mrs. R. B. Bogan in the club room of the Mansfield-Leland hotel Saturday evening, 24 sorority sisters and former classmates of Miss Ethel Mae Bogan learned of her betrothal to Cpl. Gene Cusic, now stationed in Alliance, Neb. The exact date has not been set for the wedding but September is the month chosen by the young couple.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Bogan, 287 Vennum avenue, and Cpl. Cusic's parents are Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Cusic, 171 Westwood avenue. Miss Bogan is employed by the Cleveland Ordnance division in the war department at the Hughes-Keenan company. She is a member of Zeta chapter, Tri Gamma sorority. Before entering service Cpl. Cusic was employed at the Ohio Brass company. He is now with the medical corps headquarters, army air base, in Alliance.

Guests at the party learned of the coming marriage when they were seated for the dessert-luncheon at a large U-shaped table. Little Jacquelyn Link gave a favor to each guest which was a rosebud to which was attached a small scroll. On these scrolls were written "Ethel Mae and Gene—September." The centerpiece was a dainty wishing well in silver color which held the rosebuds. White ageratum and greenery covered the unusual table decorations.

Following the serving of refreshments an informal time was enjoyed with vocal selections given by Miss Jennie Lou Gannaway. Later bridge was the diversion with high score awards presented to Miss Jeannette Werner and Miss Patty Oberlander. Mrs. Cusic and Mrs. E. O. Link were also guests at the party.

Club Calendar Small During Late Summer

Many members of the various social and patriotic clubs which are meeting during the summer months are putting in some concerted effort on war relief work as the mid-summer days drone sleepily along. There's nothing sleepy about the work they're doing, though.

Various organizations are represented by the groups who go to the Red Cross production rooms for sewing, rolling of bandages or other war work. Then there are some who do this work at their respective club meetings.

This week's calendar is of average schedule with picnics still holding precedence. Tomorrow Child Guidance club members are to meet with Mrs. LeRoy McGinty, Vennum avenue, for a picnic. Associate hostesses will be Mrs. Forest Kimmel and Mrs. Paul Ackerman. Francis Willard members of the W. C. T. U. are also picnicking at South park Tuesday noon, as are Delano auxiliary members and their families at North Lake park and Wesleyan Service Guild.

Wednesday's calendar presents the monthly morning bridge-luncheon for federation members at the Women's Club at 10:30; Post Office Clerks' auxiliary, wiener roast at 6 p. m. at Middle park; Zeta chapter, Tri Gamma sorority, picnic party.

Women of the First Presbyterian church are to hold an informal party at the church parlors Thursday in place of the regular guild meeting. Circles of the Central Methodist church will also meet that day for a joint picnic at Middle park. Circles of the First Methodist church will meet for their respective sessions.

On Friday Art Study club members will hold a picnic meeting and on the same day Astowela Garden club members will be entertained at the home of Mrs. Dean Rex, Shepard road.

Miss Stuhldreher Honored When Two Entertain

The wedding of Miss Patricia Stuhldreher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Stuhldreher, 222 Lexington avenue, and Pvt. Albert J. Baki, North Camp Polk, La., has been postponed due to Pvt. Baki's change of furlough. It had been scheduled for Aug. 21.

Friends are continuing to fete the bride-elect with lovely prenuptial parties. Last evening Mrs. Joseph Losch of Dalhart, Texas, and Miss Dorothy McDevitt were hostesses to a group of friends at the former's parents' home, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wentz, 18 Newlon place.

Eleven guests were present and spent the evening making a bride's book. During that time the honoree worked jig-saw puzzles of bridal pictures, which, when completed, gave verses directing her to her shower gifts of kitchen articles. Later refreshments were served at one long table which was attractive with appointments in red, white and blue. Tall lighted tapers graced the table.

On Tuesday evening Miss Naomi Howell will entertain for Miss Stuhldreher at the W. G. Beer home, 379 Edgewood road.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, August 17.

ACCORDING to the lunar transits active on this day, it may be difficult to gain much headway or progress in any of the affairs or objectives of life. A stubborn obstacle or impediment seems to block all manner of aims and ambitions. Industry, application, attention to details and determined effort to bridge over until times are more propitious would be advisable. Use extreme precaution in all contracts or aggreements.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is are urged to a policy of patience and perseverance during the year, which seems beset with obstacles, frustrations and impediments making it difficult to make much progress in any direction. A depressed condition of the energies, mental, physical and psychological may be at the root of such stagnation or want of achievement.

SKIN-RASH TORTURE RELIEF IS HAILED BY MILLIONS

For the itching of minor skin rashes—heat rash, baby's diaper rash—many whole families are now turning to Mexsana, formerly Mexican Heat Powder. It's the kind of medicated powder containing four ingredients recommended by specialists for these miseries. Yet this soothing, cooling, comforting powder costs little, and there's even greater savings in the larger sizes. Like millions of tiny sponges it absorbs moisture on skin, a frequent cause of irritation. Keep it always handy. Sold everywhere. Ask today for a season's supply of Mexsana.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

MY NERVES steadied themselves as Ruth Hayes flung her accusation at me. I could see she was not sure that anyone had tampered with her traveling bag with the false bottom, but something about it had evidently aroused her suspicions.

I remembered suddenly that I had not looked closely at the bag when Dicky first lifted it from the closet floor, and did not know which side had been against the wall. Knowing that Dicky did not possess the memory for details which is mine, thanks to the rigid training my mother gave me when a child, I thought that he must have put it back in the closet in reverse position, and that it was this detail which had aroused the suspicions of the "Wilderness Woman."

Express Indignation.

But I could not be sure how much she knew, so I took refuge in the natural indignation a maid would feel at the slurring accusation the woman had just voiced.

"I don't have to stand for your saying nothing like that," I said stormily. "I'm an honest woman, and I've been working here for years. I'm going to have the housekeeper come up here right away, and—"

"Stop that whining and listen to me!" she snarled. "I'm not saying you stole anything. But somebody moved that bag while I was gone, and I want to find out who was in my room if you weren't. You had nothing to do in there."

Quickly I seized the opportunity these remarks afforded me. "Oh, I understand now," I said. "Certainly, Madam, I moved your bag,—a few minutes ago. But I didn't open it. I only lifted it from one spot to another, and I thought I put it back the same way."

She put her hands on her hips, fishwife fashion, and swept me from head to foot with a look obviously intended to reduce me to cinders.

"And will you kindly tell me what reason you had for going into my closet?" she demanded witheringly. "You already had seen to my wants, and you had no business coming back into my room."

"I'm sorry, Madam," I said meekly, "but the housekeeper told me to go in, and I have to do whatever she says."

For the merest fashion of an instant I saw fear flash into her eyes. Then it was gone again, and she spoke truculently.

"So now it's the housekeeper, is it?" she sneered. "This is getting better and better. Sure the manager doesn't come into it somewhere?"

"No Madame," I answered demurely. "He didn't say he was coming up."

Her face was suddenly apoplectic with rage.

"That is enough of this stalling!" she said furiously. "Tell me this second why you moved my bag, and I warn you it had better be a good reason."

"I don't know what you call good," I said, affecting sullenness. "I only know what the housekeeper told me."

I think I was as close to being knocked unconscious as I shall ever be. Her hands clenched, and she took a step toward me; then stopped short, with a probable realization of the possible consequences to herself and her scheme if she should strike me.

"Will you get out?" she raged.

I realized something in my mind; that I was yielding to my own loathing of the woman in baiting her, and must eliminate all unnecessary talk, lest I foil my own purpose. So I merely said:

"The woman who checked out of this room last night telephoned a few minutes ago to say that she thought she had left her gloves on the shelf in the closet. She asked to have somebody look for them, so the housekeeper told me to go in and look on the shelf. I had to move the bag for fear my shoe would knock against it. I'd hate to damage such a beautiful bag, Madam."

Watching from under my eyelashes, I saw that my story had registered. But her only comment was a sneer.

"Wilderness Woman" Sneers.

"A likely story!" she said. "Don't you clean these rooms after check-outs? And did you find the gloves? Where are they? Show them to me, if you're not lying!"

"They weren't there, Madam," I replied, with an air that I was sure would have done credit to Patient Griselda herself. "Ladies often make that sort of mistake. And I didn't clean the room last night. The night maid did that, and she's sometimes a bit careless, Madame."

"While you, of course, never neglect anything" she said ironically, but with her anger and uneasiness plainly gone. "Well, that's that! Get along with you now. And here's something to prove I wasn't planning to stick-up the man next door."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

"SCOPE OF THE LAWS"

That is the heading on the introduction to the new Laws of Contract Bridge which outlines their fundamental principles and purposes. Every player should understand these, succinctly stated in the following manner:

The laws are designed to define correct procedure and to provide an adequate remedy in all cases where a player accidentally, carelessly or inadvertently disturbs the proper course of the game, or gains an unintentional but nevertheless unfair advantage.

The object of the proprieties is twofold: to familiarize players with the customs and etiquette of the game, generally accepted over a long period of years, and to enlighten those who might otherwise fail to appreciate when or how they are improperly conveying information to their partners—often a far more reprehensible offense than a violation of a law.

The laws are not designed to prevent dishonorable practice, and there are no penalties to cover either intentional violations of the laws or infringements of the proprieties. When no penalty is prescribed, the moral obligation of compliance is strongest. Ostracism is the ultimate remedy when intentional offenses are repeated. Penalties are moderated to a minimum consistent with justice, and an offending player should be ready to pay a prescribed penalty graciously. Harmony and the interests of the game are best served by a uniform enforcement of all penalties, whether automatic or selective.

Occasionally complex and difficult situations may arise which cannot be satisfactorily solved by enforcing a prescribed penalty, or to which no penalty applies, though one is merited. In such instances the players should determine and follow the fairest procedure, in view of the facts of the particular case.

When these principles are appreciated, arguments are avoided and the pleasure which the game offers is materially enhanced.

(A footnote gives these examples of dishonorable practice: Using an undisclosed or secret convention; deliberately infringing any law; making a second revoke to conceal one that has been made accidentally.)

(Another footnote gives an example of an unusual situation, thus: Should an irregularity be clearly attributable to an opponent's mistake or misstatement, it should be condoned—for instance, a lead out of turn or an improper call caused by an opponent's misstatement.)

Jimmy Lymper, enthusiastic little Illinois product who coaches the Orangemen of Galion high school, is a likeable sort of a guy. In fact I doubt if any coach in recent years has made so many friends around the North Central Ohio area in so short a time as has Jim.

But for all that, Jim is a guy who is apt to speak right out in meeting. When something meets with his disapproval he names names, dates and places.

List to Jim's latest anent the coming gridiron season:

"We're making our team up of players interested in football and training all throughout the year and not just fall players, or social lions," says Jimmy.

"Football this year and hereafter will be only for contact guys; for those who train sincerely, and for team players.

"No more will we be disgraced by such a performance as given last fall at Marion. (Marion 34, Galion 0.) In fact the first loafer or humorist will be given the gate."

Plain speaking: I wouldn't want to be a Galion loafer, or social butterfly, or humorist, with that Marion game on my mind.

Lymper warns his 1943 gridders that training rules "will be strictly enforced; army discipline will be the keynote, and if you cannot take it and dish it out, stay away from the boys who can."

His training rules include: no smoking or late hours; 10 p. m. curfew for week days, 11 for week-ends; anyone missing two practices because of detention will be dropped; no one is excused from practice without permission; and attendance at evening meetings is compulsory.

All of which means that Jimmy sees a chance to get somewhere with this year's team, and he means to get away on the right foot.

He has 44 boys, on his squad, who have been working out three days a week during the summer under Captain Emery Shaffer, with the first regular practice called for Sept. 1.

Jim says the players have shown the finest spirit of any team he has coached and he is depending on close fellowship, cooperation, and the will to win to make the season a success.

The schedule:

Sept. 17—Tiffin Calvert.
Sept. 24—Crestline.
Oct. 1—Marion.
Oct. 8—at Shelby.
Oct. 15—at Bucyrus.
Oct. 22—at Madison.
Oct. 29—Mt. Vernon.
Nov. 5—at Ashland.
Nov. 12—Willard.

Rivals Slash Brewer Lead

Margin Trimmed To Only Single Game.

(By Associated Press)

The Milwaukee Brewers, after dropping a doubleheader while their nearest American Association rivals were making twin killings, clutched a slight one-game advantage today at the top of the standings.

Louisville, only a percentage point from overtaking Toledo in the first division, rocked the Brewer 10 to 1 and 2 to 1 yesterday.

Second-place Columbus shaved Milwaukee's edge to a single game by walloping Minneapolis 22-5 in the starter and 5-4 in the nightcap.

Indianapolis, the erstwhile league leader, remained only two games behind Columbus in third place by whipping the Kansas City Blues 4 to 3 and 6 to 0.

Toledo defeated the St. Paul Saints, who have replaced Kansas City in last place, 5-3 and 3-2.

Dodgers Cut Loose Two More Players

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Infielder Joe Orengo, pitcher Rube Melton and an undisclosed amount of cash were on their way to St. Paul of the American Association from Brooklyn today in exchange for first baseman Howard Schultz, club officials announced.

In furthering his rebuilding program, Branch Rickey, president of the Dodgers, released Orengo outright to the Saints and optioned Melton for the balance of the season.

Show No Signs of Folding

Accordion-Pleated Tribe Stays Up There.

By GLEN PERKINS

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— The Cleveland Indians, long known as the "accordion" club of the American league because of their tendencies to fold when the going got tough, were giving the experts something to think about today as they basked contentedly in a tie for second place in the loop's standings.

The former "morning glories" have had their ups and downs this season, but with two-thirds of the campaign behind them were making a desperate bid to shake the cognomen that has plagued them in the past.

The Tribe has staged two formidable winning streaks this season, one of seven games and another of eight. Both, oddly enough, were broken by the Washington Senators, the longer one yesterday in the second game of a doubleheader.

Veteran Vern Kennedy pitched six-hit ball to give the Clevelanders a 6-2 victory in the opener and gain his fifth triumph of the season. Manager Lou Boudreau continued his hot batting pace with a double and two singles as Dutch Leonard was charged with the loss.

Rookie Milt Haefner stopped the Tribe, 4-0, with a six hitter in the nightcap. He and Allie Reynolds, another rookie, duelled on even terms until the sixth, when Mickey Vernon blasted a tremendous 463-foot inside-the-park homer with a mate on the bases to start Washington on the road to victory.

Rudy York maintained his home run pace for the month of August as he hit numbers nine and 10 in the first game of a double bill in which the Detroit Tigers won two from the Philadelphia Athletics.

York's second circuit clout raised his season's total to 23 and provided the Tigers with the necessary margin to down the "A's," 5-4, in eleven innings. Dizzy Trout received credit for the victory, his 13th of the season, while Luman Harris went the route for the Mackmen.

Veteran Tommy Bridges hurled six-hit ball in the finale to win his 10th game, 3-2. Outfielder Ned Harris connected for the circuit to assist Detroit and plunge the Athletics deeper into the cellar.

The Boston Red Sox whipped the St. Louis Browns, 3-2 and 4-0. George Woods was the winner in the opener and Denny Galehouse the loser, while Joe Dobson and Mace Brown collaborated on a five-hitter in the nightcap, with Dobson receiving credit for the shutout. Steve Sundra, who stopped the Yankees with one hit in his last start, was charged with the loss.

The Chicago White Sox split with the Yankees, dropping the first, 7-2, but copping the nightcap, 4-3. The second game was called after eight innings because of darkness. Ernie Bonham was the winner of the opener as Orval Grove came up with the loss. Gordon Maltzberger beat Marius Russo in the second.

In the National league, the Cincinnati Reds took two one-run decisions, 5-4 and 6-5, from the New York Giants to move into second place in the league standings. Reliefer Ace Adams was charged with the loss of the opener when Bert Haas's double scored the winning tally. Clyde Shoun, the third Cincinnati hurler, was the winner.

Joe Beggs won the second game. Johnny Allen was soaked with the loss, his second for the Giants and his third of the season.

The front running St. Louis Cardinals won the first of two games from Brooklyn, 11-3, and then dropped the nightcap, 4-3, in 10 innings. Luis Olmo drove in the winning run in the afterpiece to defeat Left-hander Ernie White. Stan Musial, the major leagues' leading hitter, and First Baseman Ray Sanders of the Cards each hit two homers to highlight the opener.

The Pittsburgh Pirates and the Boston Braves split, the Braves taking the opener behind Jim Tobin's hurling, 5-1, and then bowing to Truett (Rip) Sewell's four hitter in the nightcap, 11-1. It was Sewell's 18th victory and strengthened his position as the major's leading hurler.

The Chicago Cubs pushed the Philadelphia Phillies back into the seventh spot by winning two, 5-2, and 3-0. Hi Bithorn made it victory number 15 in the first game and Paul Derringer was the winner in the second.

Segura Captures Eastern Title

RYE, N. Y. —(INS)— Francisco (Pancho) Segura, of Guayaquil, Ecuador, sensational exponent of the two hand drive, and Miss Margaret Osborne of San Francisco reigned today as the new eastern turf court tennis champions.

Maintaining his winning streak the little South American defeated Lieut. (JG) Joe Hunt of the United States navy, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3, in the final round of the tournament at the Westchester country club.

Miss Osborne easily dispatched Miss Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., 6-2, 6-4 following up her victory over Miss Pauline Betz, the national champion in the semi-finals.

The men's doubles championship went to Hunt and Ensign Ted Schroeder, the National singles champion. They defeated Segura and Sidney Wood in the final, 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

FAN JUST WANTED A FEW SOUVENIRS

PHILADELPHIA— (INS)—The Phillies like baseball fans.

But it seemed doubtful today whether they would appreciate the manner in which James Spillane sought to show his "devotion" to the Quaker city club.

The 47-year-old watchman of a plant near the ball park was arrested in the dead of night by police who found him lugging away as many gloves, bats, balls and other equipment as he could carry.

"Just wanted a few souvenirs," he explained as authorities booked him for a hearing.

Musial Tells Batting Secret

Changed To Lighter Chunk of Timber.

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK— (U.P.) —Two little batting changes early in July lifted Stan Musial from "good hitter" to top man in the major leagues.

The Cardinals' slender, brown-haired right fielder explained these significant alterations yesterday between games of the doubleheader with the Dodgers at Ebbets field.

Musial, just in from the "sun garden," was sweat-drenched but happy as he plumped down on a dressing room bench and pulled off his gray blouse and sopping undershirt. His two homers and a single had driven in five runs as the champions downed Brooklyn, 11-3, in the opener.

Perspiring mates smacked him on the back as they herded past, with noisy spikes, to their lockers. He's "aces" with them because of his prowess and sunny disposition. Success hasn't spoiled this 22-year-old Donora (Pa.) dynamiter —this stream-lined six-footer with the aquiline nose and laughing brown eyes.

Stan laughed off the home run congratulations and said "Homers are alright. I'll certainly never refuse them; but I like triples better. Triples are almost as effective as homers, and they give you a chance to run. I like to run." He leads the majors in three-baggers, with 15.

The Polish pellet pounder tops both leagues with a batting average of .354, registered on 153 hits and including 30 doubles.

In late June, Musial was hitting about .325. At least four National league rivals were above him. This was a robust figure—an improvement over his .315 of last year, his first season with the Cards. But Stan wasn't satisfied. He thought he could do better.

"So I made two changes about July first," he explained. "I changed to a bat that was a half-ounce lighter, to get more speed into my swing. I started using a 34½-ounce bat instead of a 35. Then I shifted my grip about two inches, from a half-choke clear to the end of the bat handle. This increased the power of my drive.

* * *

"I figure that these changes—along with a bit more confidence this season helped my batting a lot."

Doubtless some of Stan's confidence stems from his relish for the right field post. Since he throws as well as bats left-handed, it is much easier for him to make the long heaves from the sun field than from the left field, where he played last season.

What pitcher gives Musial the most trouble?

Stan said, "Kirby Higbe is the toughest for me. He throws those fast knuckle balls, and I can't seem to do much with them."

Musial's remarks were prophetic. Higbe pitched the nightcap for the Dodgers, and the majors' leading batsman went hitless.

RECOGNIZED

NEW ORLEANS—(U.P.)—Jackie Callura, Hamilton, Ont., recognized by the National Boxing Association as featherweight titlist, and Phil Terranova of New York, said today that they were on edge for tonight's 15-round title match, the first championship bout held in this city in 26 years.

Four Card Clouters Are Heavy Hitters

Good reason for the St. Louis Cardinals' preponderant lead in the National league is the stickwork of this quartet of heavy-hitting Redbirds. Left to right, they are, Harry Walker, George Kurowski, Lou Klein and Stan Musial. St. Louis also leads the National league in batting.

Give Bonds As Trap Prizes

Grand American Puts Aside Gaudy Trophies.

By FRITZ HOWELL

VANDALIA—(AP)— Gaudy trophies went in to the discard today as the Amateur Trapshooting association announced that war bonds would comprise the prize list at the "bring your own shells" 44th Annual Grand American, Aug. 25, 26, and 27.

* * *

Slashed from the usual eight days to three because of war problems, the "Roaring Grand" still looms as an expensive bit or recreation for the shooters who fire the full 500 rounds and participate in the "optionals"—a wagering system under which the scattergun enthusiasts back their own ability.

Entry and "optional" fees for the three days add up to $185, to which must be added the cost of 20 boxes of shells (now as scarce as Germans in Sicily), hotel charges, meals and transportation costs.

The program calls for 200 targets at 16 yards Aug. 25; fifty pairs of doubles targets and 100 at handicaps the second day, and the 100-target grand American handicap the final day. The $10,000 guarenteed purse for the "oaring Grand" has been discarded, with the payoff depending on the numberof shooters.

Despite the fact the program calls for only 500 targets in place of the usual 1900, all the championships will be contested.

On the 200-target opening day's event, five titles will be decided over the full route, and six others on the final 100 clays. Up for decision at 200 targets will be the North America clay target, Women's Amateur clay target, Women's Amateur clay and son or daughter, and the state five-man team championships.

The final 100 will decide the class championships, veterans', junior, sub-junior, and "champion of champions" for both men and women, the latter a special event for state title holders.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By SID FEDER

(Pinch-Hitting For Hugh Fullerton.)

NEW YORK — (AP) — If Alsab isn't just about washed up, then neither are the shirts you're sending to the laundry today . . . His "great rush" in the King Philip at Narragansett Saturday against a set of strictly sprinters—carried him all the way from 8½ lengths back to the head of the stretch to 7½ at the wire.

POME

A handy guy is Rudy York.
He brings home the bacon
(we mean the pork).
Needs one more home for two dozen,
And just loves pitchers—they're all his cousin.

SCATTER-SHOT

The Yankees have now played 74 straight games without running into that military secret you carry an umbrella for . . . After bidding in that Blenheim colt for $66,000 at the Kentucky yearling sales last week, Bill Helis, the Louisiana oil man, told pals he was ready to go to $166,000 to get him . . . Jimmy Bivins probably will headline the next Cleveland fight show—in mid-September . . . After he gets through hammering on Herb Marshall in Washington Aug. 24, of course.

DIS-A AND DAT-A

See where they arrested a guy in Philadelphia yesterday on a charge of stealing all the Phillies' bats from their clubhouse. . . . What's wrong with that? . . . Do the Phils know how to use 'em? . . . The tip is out that Jack Jenkins, the 200-pound quarterback from Vanderbilt, is the best-looking rookie on the championship pro Redskins . . . Don Ameche stopped off in Lexington, Ky., to buy two race-hoss yearlings . . . One a colt by Bimelech, the other out of Lady Peace, mama of Miss Keeneland, one of the season's two-year-old filly stars . . . Kicked in $4,000 for the second one . . .

Help Seen In Grid Outlook

R. O. T. C. Men Return To College Campuses.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

CHICAGO— (INS) —It isn't generally known yet, except to a few commandants and athletic directors who have been officially apprised of the change. But, anyhow, there's a war department order that has gone through which might materially benefit college football this year, especially at those colleges that need more help right now than a man going over Niagara Falls in a test tube.

* * *

Briefly, the order is that all members of the junior class enrolled in the R. O. T. C. (Reserve Officers Training Corps) are to be returned forthwith to the campuses from which they emanated. It is suspected that a certain number of those affected will be men with football ability of greater or less degree.

Suspecting is as far as anybody cares to go at this stage, however. For one thing, it may be that the earlier war department order which bars regular army trainees from participation in college sports will likewise apply to these reservists.

For another, nobody knows how many . . . if any . . . R. O. T. C. men of the junior class will be returned to their original colleges in time to be of any use this football season.

Of course, there are those marine and navy V-12 program colleges who wouldn't be much interested, anyhow.

Notre Dame, for example, which is understood to have more football players (marine and navy trainees) than Rockne ever heard of. Or Michigan, said to be stocked like a trout run, not to forget that Northwestern is alleged to have quite a few of Minnesota's ex-Gophers, and that Purdue could run through signals with all the first flight men it fell heir to from the University of Missouri.

Reports in this connection from the east and south are inconclusive, so that, sectionally, the one certain beneficiary, if any, of the new order would be the west coast, where college football material is understood to be outstandingly sparse.

GRID STAR DIES

CHICAGO— (INS) —Funeral services will be held Wednesday for Albert Benbrook, 56, famous guard on the University of Michigan football team in 1908, 1909 and 1910.

FIND NEW HAZARD ON PUTTING GREEN

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa.—(AP)— Without as much as a "may I go through?" a big black bear strolled onto the ninth green at the Williamsport country club while Sergt. John McGee and Kenneth Weaver were putting today.

McGee and Weaver said they stared the intruder down and he shambled back into the woods.

Hahn Homers To Win Game

Hurler's Round-Trip Clout Scores 2 Runs.

Hurler Dean Hahn's home run with one mate aboard sparked a five-run American Legion rally in the fifth inning yesterday and edged East End Merchants 6-4 in the final day of play with Commercial baseball league.

Hahn held the Merchants to five hits, while Legion got only eight blows off McCarrick.

Aside from that one big inning, it was a pitcher's battle all the way, Hahn striking out 15 and McCarrick 11.

League Champion Athletic Supplies swamped Yuncker Sports 13-1 in the other game, starting out with six runs in the first two frames.

Streak Ended By Senators

Indians Win Eight Straight Victories.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— The Washington Nationals snapped a Cleveland winning streak at eight games yesterday by dividing a double header and remaining just two percentage points back of the second place Tribesmen.

The two teams return to battle today in the Nats' final 1943 appearance here.

Southpaw Milt Haefner was the ace of Washington's second game victory, pitching a six-hit 4 to 0 shutout, after the Redskins won the opener 6 to 2.

Vernon Kennedy tried for a shutout in the first game when he held the Nats scoreless until two men were out in the ninth inning.

Manager Lou Boudreau banged out a double and two singles in the first game and added a single in the afterpiece to stretch his consecutive hitting spree to nine games—14 hits in 24 times at bat.

In the first game Emil (Dutch) Leonard, knuckle ball ace, was nicked by the Indians for seven hits and five runs in the two innings he lasted.

REDS SECOND

NEW YORK —(AP)— Thanks to the New York Giants, the Cincinnati Reds are in possession of second place in the National league standings today.

The Giants made a gift of a doubleheader to the Reds yesterday by scores of 5 to 4 and 6 to 5.

Chief benefactor to the Reds' cause was Mel Ott, New York player-manager. In the eighth round of the opener he was caught trying to steal third with only one out. Two singles followed. In the nightcap he uncorked a two-base wild throw in the third to give the Reds an unearned run, and fanned in the ninth with the tying run aboard.

The payoff tally for the Reds in the first game came in the ninth, on a walk, a single and Bert Haas' double. Clyde Shoun, who relieved Joe Beggs in the seventh, was credited with the victory.

Nearly all of the action of the nightcap was crowded in the first inning when both teams scored four runs each and both starting pitchers, Harry Feldman and Joe Heusser, were sent to the showers.

Springfield Club Reaches Finals

CHARLESTON, W. Va.,—(AP)— A highly-favored Springfield, O., nine meets the Belle American Legion Junior baseball team today in the regional championship playoff of the Legion's tournament.

The Springfielders were expected to cop the title because they are undefeated thus far in regional play while the Belle squad has lost once in the joust which is being conducted on a two-losses-and-out basis. Single win would give the Ohioans the championship while Belle needs two straight.

Springfield and Belle both turned in double victories yesterday to reach the playoffs. Springfield downed Washington and Louisville Ky., and Belle defeated Charleston and Louisville.

'Great Bulk' of Ploesti Oil Fields Destroyed In Rai

STUDY PRAISES PRECISION OF U. S. BOMBERS

Intelligence Officers Assert Entire Nazi War Machine Will Feel Strain.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The American bomber raid on Rumania's Ploesti oil fields on Aug. 1 demolished the "vast bulk" of the area's refining capacity and ultimately will impose a "strain throughout the entire German war machine," Brig. Gen. E. P. Sorenson, assistant chief of air staff intelligence, revealed today.

In a statement based on detailed military study of the attack, he said the raid proved that American bombers can execute long-range precision attacks with the "accuracy of a skilled surgeon guiding his knife."

He said the targets were chosen after months of minute study of the basis of their relative importance in the entire fuel production and refining program of the Axis countries.

The Astra Romana refinery, largest in the area, was crippled by bombs which knocked its powerhouse out of operation, demolished its cracking installation and destroyed almost half its operational capacity.

The Steaua Romana refinery, newly erected, was completley wiped out and many other installations were heavily damaged.

Conceding that the effects of the raid on the Naxi war effort could not be determined immediately, he predicted they would take a heavy toll eventually.

FEED CUT LATE IN DAY BEST

Expert Says Hay Harvested In Afternoon Contains More Food Value.

(By International News Service)

ITHACA, N. Y.—Livestock fed alfalfa and other hay and forage crops cut in the late afternoon, instead of in the morning, are gaining a sharp increase in nutritive values, according to preliminary studies supervised by Prof. O. F. Curtis of the New York State college of Agriculture. These surveys show that the carbohydrate content of the crops is the highest in the late afternoon, and lowest in the early morning.

Basis of the test, says the Cornell plant pathologist, is the fact that all carbohydrates are manufactured by plants from carbondioxide and water only in the presence of light. Part of the food manufactured during the day is used up in night hours through respiration of the plant, and through growth. It stands to reason, as the tests have shown, that the plant tissues contain the most food after a full day of sunshine.

Tests with alfalfa cut and artificially dried in 1942 showed that the plots cut late in the afternoon produced 90 per cent more sugar and starch to the acre, and 25 per cent more total dry matter, than plots harvested early in the morning.

To make the tests more significant, more must be run with crops cut and dried naturally, to show what increase in food value is gained under farm field conditions. In one series of tests already made, the forage from the plots was dried in the field under natural conditions. This proved an advantage of 50 per cent more sugar and starch to the acre, and about 20 per cent more total dry matter to the acre, from plots cut in the afternoon.

LUCAS SHORT TWO TEACHERS

Vacancies Exist With Classes Scheduled To Get Under Way Sept. 7.

LUCAS—With Sept. 7 set as the date of opening the Monroe Township school, the teaching staff is still short two teachers and perhaps more, depending upon the schedule of subjects yet to be worked out by Supt. J. E. McCullough and the board of education.

Tension over a probable further vacancy was relieved last week when Glenn Mowers, mathematics teacher, failed to pass his final examination for army induction. Both Mowers and his wife are members of the staff.

Vacancies include those of third grade, created by the recent resignation of Miss Ina Weatherbie, East Mansfield, music and athletic coach. The former coach, Lawrence Deckrosh, also taught science, although these subjects may have to be taken over by other teachers already hired but whose definite schedules will be held up pending completion of the hiring, McCollough said.

Those employed to date include: Mamie Duncan, first grade; Jennie Andrews, second grade; Dorothy Mowers, fourth grade; Marzeta Barger, fifth grade; Dorothy Miller, sixth grade; Glenn Mowers, Doris Peat, Isabelle Huffman, Donna Rupert, W. S. Barger and McCollough, junior and senior high school.

Mrs. Barger, wife of the vocational agriculture teacher was named at a recent board meeting to replace Miss Mary Tucker, who resigned to continue her clerical position at the Mansfield Airport where she has been employed since school was out in the spring. Miss Peat, a native of Mansfield and a graduate of Bowling Green university, Mrs. Isabelle Huffman, Mansfield, who has substituted previously in the Lucas schools and Miss Donna Rupert, of Greenwich, an Ashland graduate, are the other new teachers signed. Mrs. Wilma Maglott will return as office secretary.

PROGRAMS THIS WEEK TO CLOSE SUMMER PLAYGROUNDS AT PARKS

Mansfield's summer playground program comes to an end this week after furnishing children of the Prospect, Johns and Liberty park districts with a vacation recreation program the past 10 weeks.

Highlighting the closing week at Johns park will be "special events days" Wednesday. Children will participate in games and contests and refreshmets will be served by the supervisors.

Friday at Johns park, presentation of pins to the outstanding children will be made by the supervisors. Pins will go to the children who have accumulated the highest total of points for the entire summer. Points are awarded for conduct, participation, courtesy and attendance.

The supervisors, women who have been in charge of the activities on the playground at Johns and Prospect parks, will be feted with dinners, Recreation Director Al Fendrick has announced.

Fendrick pronounced the program this summer as "very successful." He credited the success to the supervisors. "Their work has been excellent and they deserve the credit."

Although the park programs close this week, picnickers can still obtain free equipment for their picnics by stopping at Boy Scout headquarters, 54 North Mulberry street. This service will be available for the remainder of August.

2 YOUTHS HELD

Girl Says They Attempted To Get Her Into Auto.

Two Mansfield colored youths were held today by police on the complaint of a Park avenue west girl, who said they attempted to induce her to get into the car with them Sunday noon as she walked along Park avenue near Bowman street.

The girl told officers the colored youths drove their car close to the curb and one of them asked her to "go for a ride with us." She ignored them, but they kept following her, she said.

She gave police a description of the pair and their car and the youths were arrested Sunday afternoon. The girl said she would charge them with molesting a female.

Hytone Wins Top Stake In Dayton Saddle Horse Show

Mansfield's outstanding saddle show horse, Hytone, owned by Mr. and Mrs. S. Glen Vinson, Glenleigh Farms, won the grand championship stake for Tennessee walking horses Sunday evening at the Dayton horse show, staged as a benefit for the Army Air Forces.

Dayton's is one of the top shows of the country and the finest riders and horses of the nation were assembled for the three-day event.

Hytone, ridden by Paul Peay, Glenleigh manager and trainer, eclipsed a field of 12 "hot" walkers, and will show with his stablemate Trouble—shown by Fred Norris, at Cleveland's three-day army benefit show this week-end.

Troops from Wright field and high-ranking generals and other dignitaries of the AAF were present for Sunday night's stake classes. Thousands cheered as the famous Eddie Barham, the poker-faced trainer from Decatur, Ga., rode his sensational Lady Louise to victory in the five-gaited stake. During the show the mare, My Sensation, for years a champion, was defeated for the first time.

ASKS CHECK ON GAS USED ON TRIP BY LEWIS

Ration Board Requested To Probe Washington-Illinois Drive By Labor Leader.

(By United Press)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—A local rationing board at Washington was asked today to investigate the use of gasoline in an automobile trip which John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, allegedly made from Washington to Springfield.

Carter Jenkins, director of the Illinois district office of the Office of Price Administration, said he had received a report on Lewis' visit to Springfield and had forwarded it to a local board at Washington where Lewis maintains UMWA offices.

Clarence Selp, Decatur, Ill., ration board member, told Jenkins he had received a dozen complaints from citizens who claimed Lewis had been granted gasoline to drive from Washington to Springfield to see his mother.

When informed of the complaints by telephone Saturday night, Lewis said "no comment" and hung up. He was reported to have left Springfield for an undisclosed destination during the week-end.

Selp, who is president of the Decatur Musicians' union affiliated with the American Federation of labor, said "my union connection has nothing to do with this thing."

ALEXANDRIA, Va.—(U.P.)—Capt. James Douglas, executive secretary of the local rationing board here, said today that the board had received no official information or complaint about an automobile trip that John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, is said to have made to Springfield, Ill.

Douglas said that it was up to Illinois authorities to take the initiative in asking for an investigation of the trip. He added that it probably would take "several days" for such a request to reach Alexandria from Illinois.

Lewis holds a "C" rationing book for occupational driving, it was said. Friends of the UMW chieftain in Washington said he made several business calls during the trip to the Springfield area and that it was quite possible, as reported, that he dropped in to see his mother while there.

Lewis, in his official capacity, makes such a trip about once a year, it was said.

WAR CASUALTY

Ashlander Reported Killed In Pacific Area.

ASHLAND — Ashland county's casualty list in the present war mounted to nine with the announcement received by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pence, 1020 West Main street, of the death of their son, Pfc. Marshal Pence, 25.

The notification from the war department stated Pfc. Pence was killed in action July 29 in the southwest Pacific area.

The afternoon was spent socially and the guests presented the honorees with many gifts. The occasion also celebrated the birthday anniversaries of R. O. Darling, Mr. and Mrs. McFarland and Mr. Stuff. They were also presented with gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hunter of Perrysville were the out-of-town visitors present. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Webber, Oak street road, will entertain in the near future for Mr. and Mrs. Stuff.

40 MORE NEEDED

Red Cross Says Blood Donor Lists Nearly Filled.

When the Red Cross Blood Donor unit comes to Mansfield Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the schedule for the three days will be filled if 40 more persons volunteer to give blood on Friday.

Red Cross officials said today that the response to the blood donor has been good, but the Friday schedule is running short. Thursday is completely filled and few more can be used on Saturday, they said.

Seven hundred cards were mailed to prospective donors, and all but 150 of those have been returned to the office. This is a better response than formerly has been given.

MOVIES FRIDAY

MILLERSBURG — An educational motion picture film on the detection and control of Mastitus will be presented Friday at 8 p. m. in the Nashville school auditorium under the auspices of the Farm Bureau council.

The film will be of special interest to dairy farmers. Plans are arranged for an open discussion to be led by R. W. Wells, vocational agriculture teacher, concerning farm problems.

5 POST BONDS

City police and state patrolmen signed waivers and posted $16.30 in Mansfield municipal court on charges of speeding on U. S. Route 42 Sunday.

They were Manu Chatterfee, Yellow Springs; George Kashner, Cincinnati; Thomas Penisten, Cleveland; John A. Maher, Shaker Heights; and Joseph Downey, Akron.

Another motorist, Robert C. Terry, 195 East Fourth street, was fined $10 and costs in municipal court on a charge of speeding Saturday on East Fourth street.

ISSUES REPORT

Health Commissioner Says 6 T. B. Cases Disclosed.

Examination of 82 persons, a record number, for tuberculosis in the county chest clinic last Friday at the city building produced only six positive cases, Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, said today.

There were 59 new cases and 23 re-checks. Four of the positive reactors were among the new cases. Two of the re-checks showed positive.

Four of the positive cases were in Mansfield, Dr. Wild said. The others were county residents outside Mansfield and Shelby.

Now that Goering, according to reports, has become one of a triumvirate ruling embattled Nazi-land, he naturally is too busy to answer such foolish questions as what he meant when he promised that "not one bomb will fall on German soil."

SCRAP METAL SUPPLY STILL HOLDING OUT

Some Fear Expressed Over Prospects For Winter Steel Production.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Advancing tendencies predominated in today's early stock market proceedings.

At a fairly active opening gainers of fractions included N. Y. Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, U. S. Steel, Standard Oil (N. J.) North American, Anaconda and Kennecott.

Notice was taken of the magazine "Steel" survey which said that steelmaking scrap was being received by melters in sufficient volume to support the current high rate of production although uneasiness was falt in some quarters over prospects for winter supply.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Grains eased slightly in a quiet opening trade today. Favorable weather for crop growth was reported from many sections of the grain belt.

Wheat started unchanged to ⅜ lower, September $1.42⅞-¾. December $1.44¾-1½, and rye was ½ lower to ¾ higher, September 95½-¾.

THEATERS

Abbott, Costello Here.

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello got implicated in a bank robbery in their newest picture, "Hit the Ice," now showing at the Ohio. The comedians are photographers in the picture and that's what starts the trouble. They stumble into the gang's hideout, a hospital, and accidentally give the pass word the gang uses. When asked where they had been they reply, "Out shooting people." That starts the trouble. But when they say they shoot people for a quarter they are hired.

War Picture.

Survivors of American and other Allied Nation cargo ships torpedoed by the enemy, testify that Nazi U-Boat captains have sarcastically reproached them for arriving behind schedule. This proves that the submarine crew had advance information about the ship's sailing. The terrible danger of letting slip such information by careless talk is shown in the British film, "Next of Kin," now at the Madison. Seen in the top role is Mervyn Jones. Other Madison attraction is "Mr. Big."

Cabin In the Sky.

Stars of stage and screen combine talents to provide a musical fantasy in M.G.M.'s "Cabin In the Sky," now playing at the Ritz. Based on the New York stage show of the same name, the film deals with the struggles of Petunia, played by Ethel Waters, aided by the forces of good, to save the soul of her husband, Little Joe, played by Eddie (Rochester) Anderson. The forces of evil, depicted by Lucifer, jr., Rex Ingram, plot for the downfall of Little Joe. Co-attraction is "Silver Spurs."

BRITAIN RAIDED

Wardens Hunt For Bodies in Debris Along Coast.

LONDON — (INS) — Air raid wardens today dug among ruins of working-class homes to rescue civilians trapped under debris after German planes carried out widespread raids over southern England during the night.

Two coastal towns were attacked with high explosives in the light of flares dropped by the enemy planes.

The raiders were met by the heaviest anti-aircraft barrage set up in recent months. Two were shot down and a third so severely damaged it probably was unable to reach its base.

About 25 Nazi bombers or fighter-bombers were believed to have taken part in the raids.

PLANE PATROL OFF GUIANA TEDIOUS TASK

Bomber Crew Spends Eight Hours Over Atlantic Hunting Subs.

(By United Press)

ZANDERY FIELD, Dutch Guiana—It is a few minutes to midnight when six young men saunter up to the big twin-engined plane squatting on the runway.

The leader waves to the ground crew, gets the o.k. signal from the crew chief, and says, "Let's go."

They pile into the opening in the side of the fuselage, and noiselessly and with the experience born of long practice, arrange themselves in their proper places.

Lt. R. O. Andrew, the pilot, from Wichita, Kan., straps himself in, checks his instruments, and gets an affirmative nod from his co-pilot, Lt. E. J. Presean of Gretna, La.

The intercom telephone buzzes and the rest of the crew check in: Staff Sgt. J. J. White, engineer, from Richmond, Va.; Sgt. C. M. Sherril, bombardier, from Long Island, N. C.; Cpl. J. E. Donnell, radio operator, from Lake Charles, La., and Tech. Sgt. S. R. Mandel, radio operator, from Long Beach, N. Y.

The motors cough into life, warm up, and slowly the plane moves to the head of the runway. It gathers speed, lurches toward the jungles, and at the last minute heaves itself into the air like a fat, out-of-condition duck.

The clock on the instrument panel glows exactly midnight.

Lieut. Andrew climbs the big ship for the short run out to sea. All over the plane men are getting fixed as comfortably as they can for the long patrol ahead—eight hours of wave-hopping, looking for enemy submarines, searching out the German pig boats which might be lying in wait for a helpless freighter.

The Atlantic ocean looms blackly below as Andrew brings the plane to less than 100 feet from the water. Sergt. Mandel adjusts the instruments before him, and the delicate sound-detecting apparatus begins prodding the black water below with long, sensitive fingers.

Hour after hour the plane sweeps in circles, figure eights, squares, heads out towards Africa, returns toward South America, north, south, east, west, she flies. There is no joking on the intercom telephone; no idle chatter back and forth.

This is routine to these men—boys, rather. They go out every other night at midnight; they perform their patrol; they drop a depth charge or two now and then, and hope that they have sent another enemy to the bottom.

Dawn breaks, and Andrew heads for home. They reach the coast and climb for the run across the jungles. Zandery Field comes into view. The lieutenant banks the ship, makes a wide sweep, and slips down on the runway.

He glances at the clock on the dashboard as the wheels touch the ground.

It's exactly 8 a. m.

The boys pile out and head for supper and bed. Another patrol is done. An unromantic, anonymous, unglamorous job; no medals, just lots of flying, an occasional crack at the enemy, an occasional report of a plane "missing in action."

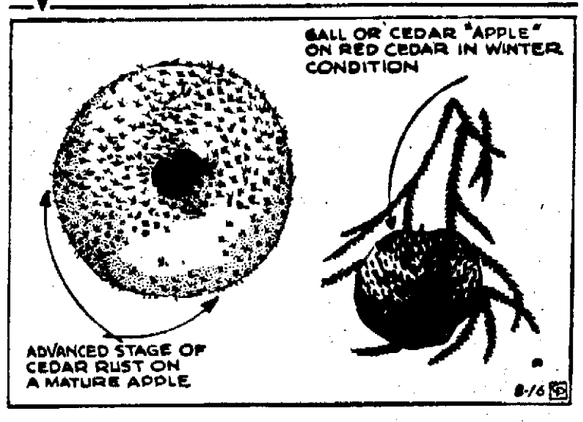
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Cedar Rust—Enemy of Victory Garden Apple Trees.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Released by Central Press Assn.)

VICTORY gardeners who have already planted apple trees, or are planning to plant some this fall, should check to see if they have red cedar trees in the ornamental plantings around house and grounds. If cedar trees are present their removal should be considered, for cedar rust is an enemy of apple trees.

Spores produced, during wet early spring weather, in orange, gelatinous horns on the galls on red cedars infect members of the apple family, including crabapples. The accompanying Garden-Graph shows the effect of cedar rust on a mature apple as well as the gall on a branch of red cedar.

The disease is a back-and-forth affair, for in July and August spores from orange cups produced on the backs of apple leaves by the original infection reinfect junipers, a single diseased leaf producing in the course of 18 months, a mature gall.

Cedar rust and other rust diseases of apples are becoming increasingly damaging — except in those sections where cedar trees in the vicinity of orchards have been removed.

At present there is no known spray that will completely control this pest when it attacks the apple. Some cases of spraying with lime-sulphur have been noted where it was impossible to remove the cedars, but control was not entirely satisfactory.

Spores of the rust disease are carried by the wind, so it is necsary to remove cedar trees for a considerable area around apple plantings to give any degree of protection. Distance depends upon the severity of the infection.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—A few weeks ago, President Roosevelt's committee on fair employment practice requested the reinstatement of 300 Negro workers in shipyards on the Pacific coast who had been let out because they refused to be segregated in a separate auxiliary of the boilermakers union of the AFL. This union, with sharp business acumen, had foreseen the great development of the shipbuilding industry and had moved in fast to obtain a closed shop whereby many thousands of future workers here were bound to join up and pay personal tribute to Harold M. Franklin, the son of J. A. Franklin, president of the union. Young Franklin, a quiet operator in a small town, Kansas City, Kan., operates one of the ripest rackets in the entire nationwide shake-down of the workers in the war effort. An article of the constitution of his old man's union compels all "regular" members to buy insurance through him and pay their premiums, which are high, along with their dues or forfeit their jobs in the war effort.

Pegler

Thus, it will be seen that discriminating sets in right there, and with the support of the national government. If a White Worker has the character and fortitude to refuse to pay tribute to the son of the union's president he is fired, the nation, in its manpower emergency, loses his man-days of work and he is liable to such penalties as Paul V. McNutt and the draft boards may contrive for him.

This discrimination, however, has received the sanction and confirmation of general practice. It operates in most of the war industries, although the ingenious racket which Old Man Franklin arranged for his kid is something rather special.

Now a question has been raised whether the segregation of the colored workers constitutes discrimination. The union thinks not, provided Negroes are readily received into the auxiliary also having been admitted are freely permitted to work.

Of course, such segregation is discrimination because it is expressly written that the members of the Negro auxiliary shall not be permitted to buy young Franklin's insurance and contribute to his great income derived from commissions on the compulsory premiums. The union's constitution contains a proviso that "Article XII does not apply to membership in auxiliary divisions which may hereafter be organized." This article makes it necessary for "regular" members to buy insurance through the president's son. Furthermore, the insurance contract between the union and the Occidental Life Insurance company of California says that the constitution, including this exclusive provision, is made a part of this agreement, and for a clincher, the second paragraph of the group policy says in these words that "members of the Negro auxiliary division" among other auxiliaries shall not be insured under this policy.

In this manner the colored brethren are denied an important social gain, to wit, their right to enrich Harold M. Franklin, the national union treasury in Kansas City, and the Occidental Life Insurance company of California, which also has a very good thing running in this deal as examination of the policy and the tables has shown.

Raymond Clapper's column did not arrive for publication today. It will be resumed at the earliest possible moment.

Now it may be wrong or unkind of the company to enter into any such discriminatory agreement but there is nothing in any law which forbids it and there are many union precedents which never have been disturbed by any labor agency of the New Deal. On the contrary, many unions have subhuman or robot auxiliaries made up of socially degraded workers subordinate to the aristocracy, or full membership, such are the B-class locals and the "permit" men who are forced to pay their dues and fees but are not allowed to vote or hold office or even participate in meetings.

Is racial discrimination then the only wrongful discrimination that President Roosevelt's directive takes notice of? It is. And are the directive and the committee charged with its enforcement or implementation opposed to discrimination as such?

They are not.

They are indifferent to discrimination for other causes and, in the present case would perform a financial disservice to the colored workers by forcing the boilermakers to admit them to "regular" membership; for in that status they would have to swell to even vaster size the rakeoff of a man whose income already represents a monumental profit from the war for the freedoms everywhere in the world except only the U. S. A.

TWINS' SLAYER CONFESSES HE KILLED 3RD BOY

Cuyahoga Youth Tells Police They Will Find Body at Bottom of River.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND — Henry Hagert, 17, slayer of 13-year-old twin brothers, has confessed killing Edgar Pugh, 15, Sheriff Joseph M. Sweeney announced today.

Edgar disappeared in March. Hagert said his body would be found in the Cuyahoga river weighted with railroad spikes with a bullet hole in the back of the head. He put it there himself, he said, after responding to "a feeling that I wanted to shoot and kill someone."

Judicial procedure was under way by which authorities planned to try Hagert for first degree murder. A delinquency warrant alleging murder was filed in juvenile court. He will be arraigned Wednesday and the juvenile court was expected to relinquish him to the grand jury for indictment.

Sweeney was trying to determine how long Hagert had preyed upon younger boys in this vicinity. Released only a week ago from the psychopathic ward of a local hospital, he is admittedly subject to unnatural sexual impulses which played a part in his motivation for slaying James and Charles Collins, 13, and kidnaping John Buchanan, 9, last week.

"I would have killed the Buchanan boy too, but he begged me so hard not to kill him that I didn't," Hagert said. "I liked that boy."

Authorities checking back over Hagert's past discovered that he had been in difficulties with the law since he was 12. He was released from the Lancaster reformatory in January, 1942, and had a police record in the suburb of Lakewood, his home.

He said he kidnaped young Pugh as he kidnaped the twin brothers and John, by picking them up on the highway in his automobile. He took him to the barren flats near the mouth of the Cuyahoga and, after a time, shot him in the back of the head. After throwing the weighted body in the river, he still could see it. He thought he saw it move so "I fired three or four more times just to make sure."

LINDBERGH CASE FIGURE JAILED IN ARMY THEFTS

Former Government Employe Accused by FBI of Stealing Material From Depots.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Director J. Edgar Hoover of the federal bureau of investigation announced today that Archibald Watson Loney, 60, former interior department employe who contradicted state testimony in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, has been arrested at Twin Falls, Ida., on charges of stealing supplies from Utah army depots where he had held civilian jobs.

One complaint filed in Ogden, Utah, charged Loney with stealing 112 rolls of slate composition roofing material last May. The material was the property of a private contractor and was stored in a government warehouse at Hill Field, Utah, where Loney was employed as a lumber supervisor.

Another complaint charged theft of 2,000 board feet of lumber from the war department a year ago at the Utah army service forces depot in Ogden where Loney then was employed as construction supervisor.

Seized Saturday, Loney pleaded innocent yesterday before a U. S. commissioner at Burley, Ida. He was held in $10,000 bond for removal to Salt Lake City. The two charges carry maximum penalties on conviction of $10,000 fine, or 10 years' imprisonment or both.

Subsequent to the conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in 1935 for the kidnap murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., Hoover said, Loney testified as a "lumber expert" and contradicted testimony given at the trial to the effect that "rail 16" of the ladder used in the kidnaping had been taken from flooring in the attic of Hauptmann's home.

Loney was employed at the time as an office engineer, federal public works administration, department of the interior. He testified at the request of the then governor of New Jersey, Harold G. Hoffman, at special hearings not connected with Hauptmann's trial. Hauptmann ultimately was electricuted.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

What Broadway Needs.

(And I Don't Mean Shoes, Nylons or Steaks!)

BROADWAY needs a lot of things or it needs nothing, depending on which of its citizens you're interviewing and how prosperous he is at the time of your question. A horse-player outside Lindy's who has recently come from a successful day at the track will inform you blissfully that the old street is perfect. A producer at the Sardi bar, whose latest opus has just died in his arms after four performances, will draw up a list as long as "Gone With the Wind," item one probably stating that what Broadway needs is a plague that will wipe out everything, starting with the drama critics.

Kilgallen

A wide-eyed service man seeing New York for the first time probably couldn't suggest a single improvement. A crowd-weary native of Manhattan might yearn to see the street as it was when there was elbow-room for the locals in their favorite bars and restaurants. It all depends on the point of view.

With uniformed lads and lassies, swingshifters, grifters, tourists and just plain sightseers added to the regular crush, it seems to me that what Broadway really needs most of these days and nights is an upper deck for the overflow of walkers . . . There are plenty of cuties in the dimout, but if Hollywood would only give them furloughs, Broadway could use Ginny Simms and Dinah Shore, two unattached belles with oomph and Southern sweet-talk . . . Texas still beams about the nickel stogie, but the boys around Times Square would settle for a good one at three times that figure . . . And talking about figures, the hour-glass chasis of Mae West would be a stimulating sight on any Broadway board.

Taking a cross-section of opinion, you might discover that Broadway needs these things . . . a new comedy by Eugene O'Neill, after all these years . . . A musical comedy repertory company that would revive "The Cat and the Fiddle," "Music In the Air," "Sweet Adeline" and other great oldies . . . A revival of London's pleasant custom of having a bar in each theater, to brighten the intermission of a good show and steel audiences for the third act of a bad one . . . A new Cole Porter ballad for swoon singers like Dick Haymes and Frank Sinatra to wrap up and deliver . . . A new Algonquin round table of clever people making witty remarks about trivial things . . . An end to the Petrillo-dillo record ban.

The town could stand a drama with Margaret Sullavan and a musical with Bea Lillie . . . A summer straw hat for the Little Flower . . . Air-conditioning systems for several of the local hot (and I do mean hot!) spots . . . More Johnny Mercer tunes sung by Bing Crosby . . . Drug store fountains where you can get served while you're still thirsty . . . Noon floor shows for night-shift workers . . . A news commentator with a voice like Spencer Tracy's . . . Another Will Rogers to give us a smile with the Washington headlines . . . A theater directory on every lamp-post in Times Square . . . More auditions for young hopefuls . . . Two-bit movies that honestly admit they're oldies and don't pull the badger game by billing stars of today in letters THIS HIGH, when inside, they just appear for a flash.

You can't have everything, but there's no law against trying . . . The natives could stand a glimpse of the Freddy Slack band that has been causing such a stir on the Coast . . . And benches for trolley passengers, so they can get off their 18 coupons while waiting for the Toonerville transporter . . . Morton Downey in a musical comedy . . . A new Brenda Frazier, just for the fun and photos of it . . . A substitute for gin rummy. Everybody's getting too good at it . . . The zany Hartmans performing in one of the local supper spots . . . A Hall of Fame for those who made the street—Jeanne Eagles, Jack Donahue, George M. Cohan, Jimmy Walker, George Gershwin, Irving Berlin and the other mazda immortals . . . Landscaping at Duffy Square.

SEIZE LIQUOR, QUESTION FIVE

Police Believe Whisky Was Stolen From State Stores.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—Five men were held by police for investigation today after authorities seized 47 cases of liquor in an east side garage.

Two of the men, said by police to be former convicts, were arrested last night when they appeared at the garage after detectives had seized the liquor valued at $1,410. Three other men were arrested later.

Police believe they may have broken up a black market in liquor stolen from state liquor stores.

NO IMAGINATION

That's LaGuardia Charge Against Selective Service.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Accusing the selective service administration of being "unimaginative" Mayor F. H. LaGuardia today maintained that Washington draft officials have "failed to grasp the situation."

In his weekly radio broadcast LaGuardia said that draft officials are creating uncertainty in the public mind because of their attempt to be expedient rather than efficient.

CLAIMS OK FOR V-MAIL VOTING

Senator Says War and Navy Departments Approve Service Ballots.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Sen. Theodore Green (D.), Rhode Island, chairman of the senate elections committee, said today that war and navy departments have approved proposals for V-mail voting by soldiers and sailors in the 1944 presidential election.

"I have talked with officials and been informed that the method set out in the Green-Lucas bill is satisfactory," said Green.

A senate elections sub-committee plans to conduct hearings on the measure next month with a view to speeding enactment of legislation so that upwards of 3,000,000 service voters who may be overseas next year can vote.

The bill requires the secretaries of war and navy to have printed short ballots on paper suitable for V-mail processing, to be delivered to service men overseas.

The ballot would have a blank where the soldier could write in his party choice, and thus vote for all federal candidates of that party. Spaces also would be provided to write in choices for president, vice president, and senator and congressman.

The war and navy departments would be required to send the V-mail ballots back to the various secretaries of state, who would deliver them to precincts for counting.

TWO HURT WHEN SWITCH FAILS

Power Cut Off at Prison, State House, Office Building.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Two men were injured, one seriously, when a main switch blew out at the Ohio penitentiary power house, cutting off the power and lights at the prison, the state house, and the state office building.

The injured were J. H. Townsend, chief engineer, who suffered severe shock, and John D. Poth, 35, Columbus inmate sentenced for robbery, who was burned seriously.

Authorities reported that the men were cleaning a switch when an oil rag being used by Roth apparently caused a short circuit.

County authorities are often called to investigate mysterious deaths of human beings, but Sheriff Frank E. Robinson Sunday was asked to solve the mystery surrounding the unexpected death of a horse on a Springfield township farm, and it didn't take long to find the answer. When the owner found the animal dying in the barn with what appeared to be a bullet wound in its chest, he thought someone had shot the horse. The sheriff followed a trail of blood into a field where the house had been on pasture and soon learned that a steel prong on a hay rake had pierced the animal's chest, causing the fatal injury. The animal apparently had bumped into the rake, Sheriff Robinson said.

Mansfield may get to see the Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey circus, the biggest of them all, before the summer is over. The big show's advance agent has been in the city looking for show grounds, and Mayor W. J. Locke said he understood the circus wants to appear here about Sept. 18. If it comes to Mansfield, the circus will be showing here for the first time in five years. It usually plays only the larger cities, but this year it is forced to limit its tour into the west because of travel restrictions.

History books tell about Abraham Lincoln, then a clerk in a grocery store, walking miles to return four cents to a customer after he had overcharged that customer. An incident somewhat similar to that occurred Saturday at Mansfield Public library. After a Mansfield resident had paid a fine on a book two-months overdue, the librarians, discovered they had charged the "customer" seven cents too much. After discovering the man had no telephone, they called him on a neighbor's phone to straighten out the over-charge.

Bowling Green Chairman Says He Won't Send Pre-Pearl Harbor Men to Service.

(By Associated Press)

BOWLING GREEN — Tom C. Wooden resigned today as chairman of Wood county's selective service board No. 1 rather than draft pre-Pearl Harbor fathers.

In a letter to Col. C. W. Goble, state director of selective service, Wooden said:

"I can not, and will not, be a party to a system permitting these conditions which will take family men from established homes. Some of long standing."

The resignation was effective today.

"Several circumstances cause me to take this action," Wooden said. "During the 34 months I have been associated with the selective service, I have endeavored to go along with the system, though many times not agreeing with the frequent changes in the established rules and regulations. During my tenure, I have tried to 'keep up' with regulations and to perform my duties as chairman in accordance with my oath. . . .

"The number of single men who have been classified as essential through agencies other than the local board has been too great. If you will check, you will discover that we have had a high percentage of reversals; yet the general public does not know this and consequently criticizes the local board."

Wooden, an insurance executive, is a veteran of the first world war.

HEIRESS FALLS INTO POOL, DIES

Drowns After Accident at Palatial Desert Home.

PHOENIX, Ariz. —(AP)— Accidently knocked unconscious, Mrs. Gloria Gould Barker, member of the prominant Gould family, tumbled into the swimming pool of her palatial desert home Sunday and drowned. Efforts of doctors failed to revive her.

Wallace MacFarlane Barker, her husband, and their butler found the body after she had been missing only 15 minutes, the sheriff's office said.

Mrs. Barker was the granddaughter of the late Jay Gould, famous financier of the last century.

MURDER HINTED

Arkansan's Battered Body Found on River Bank.

STEUBENVILLE —(INS)— The possibility that Martin Alexander Childers, 53, of Des Arc, Ark., whose battered body was found near the Ohio river bank in Steubenville, may have been a murder victim was investigated by authorities today.

Coroner Ray Slee said that Childers' injuries were not those of a hit-skip victim, although $54 on his person discounted a robbery theory.

An inquest was to be held today with fellow crew members on an Ohio river boat scheduled to testify. Slee said that an unnamed man was being held for questioning.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — Among Hollywood's stellar coterie of sideline farmers, shopkeepers, elite kennel owners, and gold mine entrepreneurs the name of Claudette Colbert is conspicuously missing.

For all that, our Claudette is one of our most successful business women. The only board of directors on which she sits is a one-woman board whose attention is devoted solely to the business firm of one C. Colbert, actress. Probably because she tried the other things once and learned a lesson, she is content to make acting a full-time job.

Coons

Not that she doesn't admire the others who can rush from roles to rural enterprises and back again, or turn a neat profit on a real estate deal between emotional scenes. That sort of thing is not for Colbert—it's a mystery to her how they do it.

This is her tune and she sings it with conviction: "As far as I'm concerned, I believe if you're an actress and want to build yourself to stardom and remain there, then that's a business which demands all your time. You must get to know every phase of that business until you have become an expert. If you aren't an expert in any enterprise, you'd better stay out of it.

"I don't know anything about the dairy, machine, furniture or restaurant business, so I stay away from them. And if you sink money into something you don't understand in every detail, and have to rely on someone else to run it for you on your money, then you're foolish."

It has been nearly ten years since Claudette had a lesson in the prime importance of proper vehicles in advancing a career. Luck was on her side that time. All her fans knew that her judgment on the script of "It Happened One Night" was unfavorable, and she went into the picture hesitantly. When it made her a star and won her an Oscar besides, she had to take stock of her abilities as a story-picker, and the inventory has helped. Today she's sharp—the record of her films is the proof.

She likes to vary comedies with more serious stories. She will frolic lightly through pieces like "Palm Beach Story" and "No Time for Love" but periodically she will do an emotional job like last year's "Remember the Day" or this year's "So Proudly We Hail." This story of nurses on Bataan, incidentally, is her first war picture, although "Remember the Day" was backgrounded in another war.

The record would justify her insistence on making acting her sole business concern. But experience also played its part in persuading her to stick to what she knows.

"Once I tried the other things," she says, "but I never put money into any enterprise that ever earned me a dime. Then I realized that I wasn't a financier. In fact, I have a hard time adding. A long time ago, I turned the arithmetic over to my brother who's an agent. What I earn, I make sure I'm going to keep around. I invest in war bonds and annuities."

REPAIR CREWS IN AUSTRALIA DO 'IMPOSSIBLE'

Crash Crews Roam Jungles, Salvage and Repair Fighting Planes.

(By United Press)

SACRAMENTO — The Americans inside our airplanes aren't the only ones who are amazing the world with skillful exploits—the men who patch them up and keep them flying are the unsung heroes.

The story of the air service squadrons and the ingenuity they are using to keep American planes in the air was related by Maj. James A. Culbertson, commander of a repair squadron at Point Darwin in Australia for the past 15 months and the first man back from that area since the war began. He flew back to McClellan Field, the army's huge repair depot at Sacramento, prior to joining the training command to pass along lessons learned in Australia.

For one thing, Major Culbertson said leisure and days off are unknown to the men in the repair crews. They work from dawn until late at night, often around the clock, to get wrecked planes back into combat. Crash crews roam as far as 1,000 miles into the jungle bush to find lost planes and salvage as much as possible.

He told of one plane coming back with 3,000 holes. No one thought it would fly again, but it was back on the fighting line in a week. In the early days of 1942, when fresh pilots from the states were still learning the ways of combat, many planes crashed but it enabled the service squadron to build up a store of spare parts.

From February to June, last year, the squadron's equipment was still enroute, so home-made tools were manufactured. The shops and warehouses were dispersed over four square miles and everything was so cleverly concealed in the jungle that the enemy has never located the base. The runway is dirt and grass, bordered by giant ant-hills with ants a half-inch long.

Lack of roads often required salvage crews to go hundreds of miles along the coast by boat and then use jeeps towing-sleds to cross boggy marshes to wrecked planes. Giant wrecking trucks usually plowed through trees and brush to make a road. There was no rest in the repair operations despite 120-degree heat, blinding dust storms, bombing blackouts, rainstorms bringing from 4 to 8 inches in an hour, and crude living conditions.

The repair depot was so isolated it took men from six to eight weeks to reach the nearest town by truck, so no one left the base for some 10 months. The Darwin squadron not only kept three squadrons of fighter planes serviced and repaired but any other Allied aircraft which came in the area, which included Flying Fortresses, Liberators, Medium bombers, flying boats and most everything with wings.

Culbertson's service unit, comprising about 720 men, was the first to get into combat in Australia after the war and still is on the job. A total of 44 planes was salvaged in the first seven months and the mechanics did everything but overhaul motors. When they left the States, few of the soldiers had previous airplane training.

Capt. James Braslow used typical Yankee ingenuity to make the squadron one of the healthiest in Australia. All ponds for many miles were sprayed with oil to combat mosquitos, the oxygen equipment from a wrecked bomber was installed in an ambulance, sterilizing equipment was fashioned from blowtorches and other means taken to keep the men out of the hospital.

Ten-foot crocodiles discouraged swimming in the river, so a bamboo platform was rigged up with a hand pump to provide makeshift showerbaths. The men seldom knew the day of the week or month as they toiled to keep their planes in repair. Turkeys promised for Thanksgiving and Christmas never arrived and their disgaste for mutton grew intense.

The major is a "young" veteran of army life, having fought on the Mexican border in 1916 when only a lad of 16, then went to France as a doughboy in 1918. He returned to his home in Erie, Pa., after the war, finished high school, graduated from Allegheny college, took graduate work in geology at Oklahoma University, and became a geological engineer for a major oil company.

He was back in uniform a few days after Pearl Harber and took his service squadron to Australia a year later.

LIVE IN HOPES

STOCKHOLM—(INS)—The present ration of meat and pork in Sweden is likely to be increased during the coming winter, it was stated today by G. A. Holmberg, managing director of the Swedish Meat Producers' Association.

Better crops, both during 1942 and this year, is one reason given for the possible increase, Mr. Holmberg said, adding that the lowered supply of livestock caused by the extensive slaughtering during 1940 and 1941, is now being overcome.

FIERCE POISON-ARROW TRIBE DECLARES WAR ON GERMANS

CARACAS — South America's fierce, poison-arrow warriors of the Jokomatari tribe, who range the dense jungle on the border of Brazil and Venezuela, have just learned about the war and have joined forces with the United Nations.

The story is told by Captain Felix Cardona, chief of explorations for the Venezuelan government, just returned from the deep reaches of the interior after mapping the borderline between the two countries.

The Jokomataris had seen only one white man before Cardona came—a German trader who gave them some German-made machetes some years ago. When Cardona first visited the region in 1939 he brought a supply of American machetes. The German goods rusted and soon broke. The American machetes are still in good use.

"That is the original reason the Jokomataris don't like the Germans," Capt. Cardona said. "But when I told them how the Aryans were led by a cruel chief who smoked the tobaccos of peace with other tribes then shot them in the back, killing women and children as well as warriors, the old women chieftain of the tribe instructed her men to shoot all Germans on sight."

The Jokomatari are tall, fair-skinned and almost white. Unlike other tribes in the same section of South America, they follow a matriarchal system of government, the oldest woman of the family directing its destinies. Clever fighters, they are feared by other Indians.

The Jokomatari use seven-foot bows of black palm, one of the hardest woods known, and tip their war-arrows with deadly curare poison, Capt. Cardona said.

How they are going to distinguish Germans from Americans or Venezuelans, Captain Cardona did not know.

WAR-TIME JEWELRY PURCHASES SET NEW RECORD FOR TRADE

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—The bridegrooms who are dashing to the altar with their brides in unprecedented numbers these days, are buying wedding rings.

Fond wives, sweethearts and mothers are giving going-away presents, especially wrist-watches, to the boys in the service.

Girls are purchasing sparkling rings, ear rings, necklaces and clips to enhance their feminine charms.

War-time buying of jewelry, including wedding and engagement rings, has raised the jewelry business to a new all-time high, expected this year to surpass even last year's record of $790,000,000 in sales, it was disclosed today.

Retail jewelers' sales in January, 1943, were 29 per cent, and in February, 44 per cent above those of the corresponding months of 1942, according to official government figures, quoted by Fred Cole, editor of Circular-Keystone, trade publication in the field.

These increases undoubtedly will continue, said Cole, until the admittedly large stocks of the jewelers are exhausted. Then, restrictions and priorities, which already have cast a damper on manufacturers' activities, will be felt by the jewelers and the general public.

Dan Cupid's influence looms large. There were an estimated 1,800,000 marriages in 1943, an increase of 83 per cent over 1932, Circular-Keystone's survey shows. For almost every marriage there was a ring.

But wedding rings, like everything else, aren't what they used to be before Pearl Harbor. Platinum is out for the duration. Copper, an important gold alloy, is restricted.

A new metal, palladium similar in color to platinum, is making its appearance, and will be more widely used in the future, Cole revealed. It is mined in Canada as a by-product of nickel.

Wrist-watches, which are still coming into this country from Switzerland, Genoa and Lisbon, are bought in tremendous quantities by wives, mothers and sweethearts for the service men.

And because a lot of people are earning more money than ever before, women are flocking to buy jewelry to enhance their charms. Huge ostentatious stones, topaz, amethyst, aquamarine, zircon, jade, coral and moonstone are popular for rings. Earrings, necklaces and clips currently are in style.

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — (U.P.) — The experiment of importing Mexican labor to harvest the United States' war crops has been pronounced a complete success by Milton R. AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 1943.

Some congressmen seem to think it's time to lock the barn door against a third term.

According to Robert Quillen, a self-made man is "one who married a smart woman and wasn't too vain to accept her advice."

Metal from confiscated slot machines in the Los Angeles area is being used to make booby traps for use by the army—which seems rather appropriate.

Rome Seeks 'Open City' Security

EFFORTS to gain for Rome the protection accorded an "open city" without meeting requirements established by international law are unlikely to succeed, despite an almost universal desire to spare that ancient city from the devastation wrought by Axis powers on other great cities.

So far as can be learned, no steps have yet been taken by the Italian government to strip Rome of the military defenses, production and transportation facilities and direction of war policies that would be necessary to justify "open city" recognition, nor is this likely to be done while Italy continues as a factor in the war.

Those who recall the intensified warfare of the Japanese against Manila, after that city had complied with all requirements and made an "open city" declaration, will be inclined to be unsympathetic toward Axis gestures along this line without proof of intentions to act in good faith.

There has even been some talk of a Hitler move to gain security by declaring Berlin an "open city," which makes near approach to absurdity when consideration is given to Germany's ruthless destruction of other cities during the heyday of Nazi aggression.

Probe Highway Department 'Jobs'

MORE than Cuyahoga county interest is involved in charges being made by the Cleveland Press that Governor John W. Bricker and Congressman George Bender, chairman of the Cuyahoga county Republican central committee, are using the state highway department to serve "political and personal interests" in that county, thus violating criminal laws of the state and defrauding the public.

It is charged by the Press, which made a comprehensive investigation, that jobs in the highway department have been distributed on "an outright patronage basis", without regard for laws banning political activity by civil service employes, and that, in some instances political jobholders have received pay from the state while doing private work for Congressman Bender.

There is the charge also that "some Republican jobholders in the highway department do nothing at all"—but this has become so widely accepted as common practice of political hangers-on that it is unlikely to cause any considerable furor.

Revealing that 82 Republican ward leaders and precinct committeemen had jobs in the classified service of the state highway department in Cuyahoga county, the Press quite justifiably contends: "So many active political figures could not be carried on the payroll in violation of civil service laws WITHOUT THE KNOWLEDGE AND APPROVAL OF SOMEBODY HIGH IN THE STATE ADMINISTRATION."

The state highway department, with immense funds at its disposal seems peculiarly adapted to serve as a dumping ground for political party "workers" unaccustomed to any other sort of work, and also as a vehicle for chicanery and favoritism—with the public serving as the goat.

It seems quite unlikely that conditions revealed by the Press as existing in Cuyahoga county are confined to that county. A statewide investigation, rather than one limited to Cuyahoga county, seems in order.

Spirit of 'Covered Wagon Days'

GEORGE WASHINGTON MARTIN has built him a covered wagon, and with three good percheron mares and a load of food and gear is on his way from Painesville to International Falls, Minn., where he hopes to arrive in October. Mr. Martin, who is 66 years old, owns land there, expects to clear enough to build a cabin this fall, and to start farming it next spring. When the cabin is ready, Mrs. Martin, equally "young and adventurous," will join him.

Rate of travel is about three miles an hour, which is a better average than the forefathers made, for Martin has good roads and bridges, whereas his elders often had to cut trails, ford streams, sometimes fight Indians.

There are not many covered wagons now, but the spirit of them still exists. The trend towards resettlement on land is growing. After the war it might even become a movement.

Strange Benefactor of Humanity

FEW PERSONS have found such a strange way to better conditions for others as did Clifford W. Beers, who died recently. Of him it might be said, "He made the world better because he lost his mind."

A number of years ago Mr. Beers was adjudged insane and was confined in an asylum for three years. The brutal treatment he received caused him, upon his recovery, to devote himself to improving the conditions under which insane patients had to live. His autobiography, "A Mind That Found Itself," records his harrowing experiences.

With the meager pay available and the distasteful character of the work, it has always been and still is hard to get suitable asylum attendants. Even at their worst, however, they are now nowhere so bad as the men who guarded Beers.

Improvements in technique, derived in large part from his book, and the work of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene which Beers founded, have done much to remove what was 40 years ago a national disgrace.

Plenty of Anti-Freeze, Anyhow

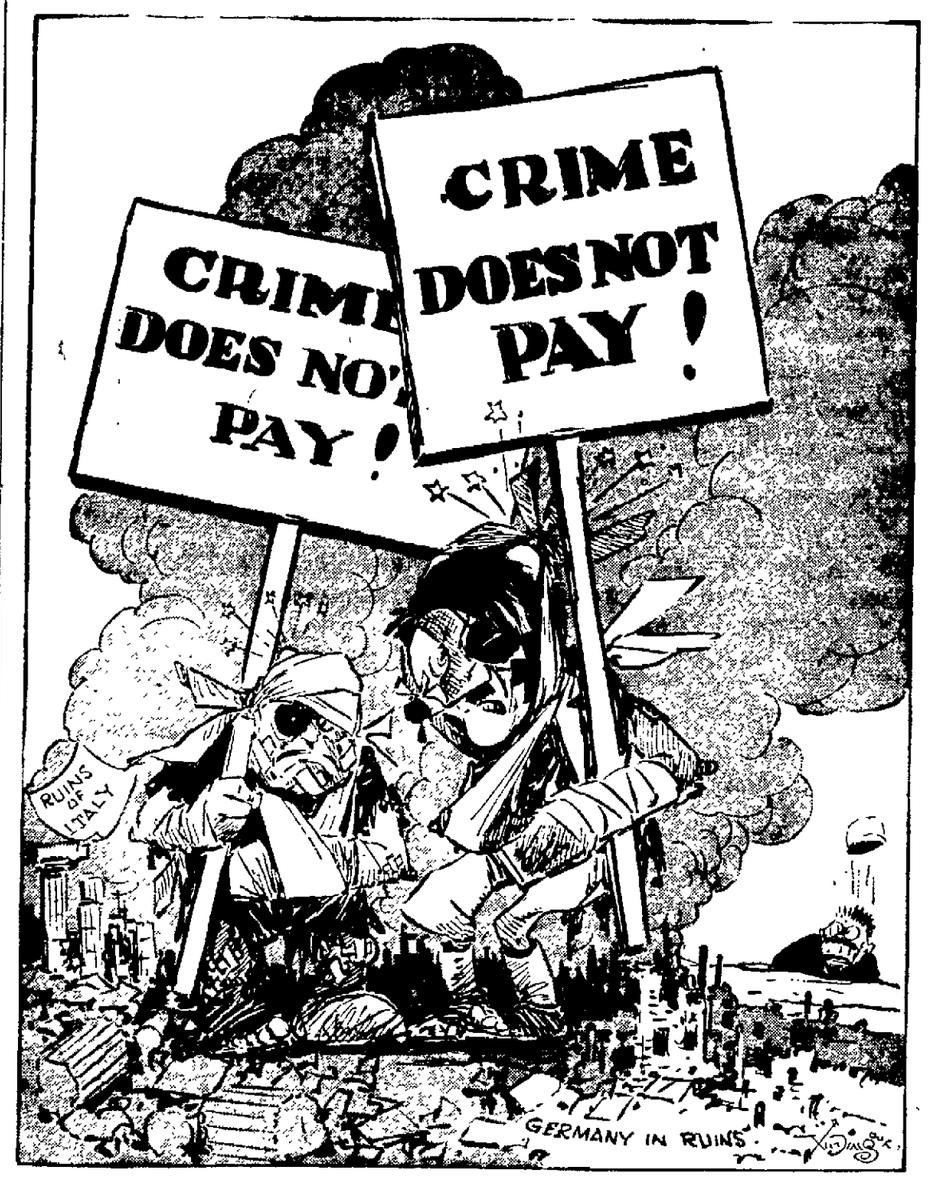
NEWS comes from the War Production Board that there will be plenty of anti-freeze for cars this winter, with 45,000,000 gallons already allocated.

This is good news for the drivers who habitually use it and will need it more than ever this winter, when their cars will make shorter trips and wait more hours in between.

Propinquity is now said to be causing heart trouble among some men and women workers—this being an old ailment that is ordinarily not serious.

There's still some question as to whether ardent New Dealers consider their views as political or religious.

SOME PEOPLE CAN LEARN ONLY BY EXPERIENCE



Talk of Hopkins 'Break' Persists

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — It is far too early to be certain that Harry Hopkins and President Roosevelt have reached the end of their beautiful friendship, despite categorical statements to this effect under by-lines of self admitted "insiders."

It is certainly true that most of the New Deal left-wingers believe this because they are the ones who have been slipping the story to men who have been writing it. The left-wingers may be indulging in wishful thinking but one would never suspect it to hear them. They are very positive.

Some cite chapter and verse saying that Mrs. Roosevelt has won a great victory in ousting her old friend Hopkins, who lately has been growing more conservative and no longer sees eye to eye with Henry A. Wallace, Ben Cohen, and the whole group of Frankfurters.

Incidentally, if the story should turn out to be true that particular tribe envisions their arrival in the promised land for there is no doubt that, with Harry Hopkins out, the most important figure in influencing the president then would be Justice Felix Frankfurter. He has had many of his bright young men put in key posts throughout the government.

BUT the tale is surprisingly pat, timed with the removal of Hopkins and his bride (who is never called anything in left wing circles but "Mrs. Macy") from the White House. No. one alleges that Mrs. Roosevelt has said anything spiteful about Harry, and no one can be found who is willing to admit that he or she heard the president's wife admit it.

But there is plenty of talk about "no house being big enough for two women," and all sorts of things are alleged to have happened in the executive mansion which irritated Mrs. Roosevelt.

Just when she was there long enough to find out about them is not explained.

It is all very curious, if one looks back through the history of the apparent ups and downs of Harry Hopkins since the New Deal came into power. It has been generally forgotten that at the beginning of the 1936 campaign it was officially hinted that he was "out." At any rate Harry disappeared and did not get back in the limelight until after the election.

At the time the hints were circulated it was freely charged by Republican orators that the whole thing was just a fake calculated to appease conservatives among the electorate, and that after election Hopkins would be back.

This was in line with the theory, they said, that Roosevelt knew he would win the radical vote anyhow so he wanted to see how many he could get on the other side of the street. Whether it was "planned that way" or not it worked pretty well, and, sure enough, Harry was back at Roosevelt's right hand immediately after election.

BUT this time it is the left-wingers who want Hopkins ousted and kept out. The conservatives are now alleged to be his friends. It is the radicals who are said to be doing their level best to prevent the wound they hope is there from healing by the usual device of giving it as much publicity as possible.

Maybe they really believe Harry has become a reactionary, but to an outsider it looks more like a scramble for the best seats near the throne. If Hopkins is really out there is surely a lot of power to be seized—or divided.

One Man's Opinion

WELL, Saturday was Atlantic Charter day and it passed off quietly.

* * *

We got up early, took our little United Nations flag and went downtown to see the parade.

* * *

But the strangest thing happened! There wasn't any!

* * *

We especially wanted to see the Russian float dedicated to the four freedoms.

Furthermore on our way home we stopped by two angry citizens who demanded to know what we were doing "waving that foreign flag around in the United States."

* * *

We told them that it wasn't a foreign flag. We said it was designed and made right here in the United States and that the OWI even had suggested breaking it out on our Flag day.

* * *

They said, oh yeah . . . and what was the matter with the star spangled banner? Why couldn't we carry our own flag?

* * *

We said nothing . . . but that would make us nationalists and it's old fashioned. You gotta be a citizen of the world.

* * *

They said nuts to that . . . being a citizen of the U. S. A. was enough for them.

* * *

So we told them they were reactionary isolationists . . . and probably fascists too . . . and hurried on home.

* * *

Bantam Corn

IT IS TIME to again write "corn-on-the-cob" into the record. Hybrid Bantam appears to be the sweetest and most quickly matured of all early varieties. Victory gardens have provided hundreds of city homes with the first fresh meal of sweet corn.

Last Sunday afternoon I helped to pick some in a neighbor's garden. The stalks had grown rapidly from late showers, and the silk was already dark and dried. The whole patch, in the late afternoon was already cool and had that sweet, heavy appetizing odor that never tires the senses.

We gathered three dozen ears from a tiny corner of the plot and carried them unhusked up through the woods to the house where a kettle of water was boiling. Quickly we tore off the husks, cleaned the grains of silks, and immersed them in steaming water. Hardly ten minutes elapsed from the picking to the merry boiling pot. Twenty minutes, and our meal was stacked upon a platter to cool.

We pressed no silver knobs into the ears for handles. We used our hands. Homemade butter dripped from the juicy kernels as our teeth sank in. Our mouths and cheeks were buttered, too. We did not care. Such luscious flavor is always worth the primitive method of eating.

In all but three of the scores of gardens I have seen this year, sweet corn held ample space. If too abundant to eat off the cob, it will be canned and dried. Evaporating pans of corn upon the stove, at this time of year, are the common sight in country kitchens. In my boyhood home among the Pennsylvania Dutch, the poke of dried corn in the pantry was as necessary as any staple food we stored. This war has brought us back to earlier, simpler ways of food preservation. No doubt the flinty grains of dried corn will come into their own again next winter.

Timely Editorial

Capital Punishment Needed.

Capital punishment for murder, if it had existed in Michigan, might have deterred the four youths who set out with a 22-caliber rifle last June 21 to kill Negroes.

There is a type of mentality to which the only practical deterrent from this most evil of crimes is the threat of retribution in kind. No one can have read the callous comments of these youths on their deeds without gaining the impression that theirs undoubtedly are mentalities of that sort.

They are untouched by remorse and undismayed by the prospect of imprisonment. In the taking of the life of a fellow human being they were, and are, as completely uninhibited as though morals and law—Michigan law—did not exist.

Michigan should have a law that would exact of the deliberate killer the one penalty he is apt to respect, the penalty of death.—Detroit News.

ODD FACT

A saboteur organ grinder gained the good will of German soldiers by playing tunes for them. They let him leave his music box in the barracks and later an explosion occurred.

One-Minute Test.

2. What are the two general classes of "contempt of court?"

Hints On Etiquette.

It is a very good idea to have a physical examination before you go in swimming. Many people die of unsuspected weak hearts while in swimming.

One-Minute Test Answers.

1. No; but intoxication may be used to rebut a charge of malicious intent.

2. Direct contempt — interference with court proceedings. Indirect contempt—not in the immediate presence of the court, but impending justice, such as intimidation of witnesses.

3. No, his guilt must still be proven.

Washington Merry-Go-Round By DREW PEARSON

Churchill, Roosevelt Expected To Discuss Second Front Plans

WASHINGTON—The capital is watching an agricultural conference called in Minneapolis today by Minnesota's anti-administration Congressman August Andresen.

The conference consists of congressmen and some senators from Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota and possibly Iowa to discuss farm problems and foreign policies. Andresen, an isolationist reactionary, says he wants to take congress back to the people and is planning to throw the meeting open to public discussion.

It is suspected, however, that his chief idea is to strengthen his own political fences and boost the Farm Bureaus and Cooperatives as against the Triple A groups.

What particularly intrigues Washington, however, is a letter recently written by Congressman Andresen in which he gives encouragement to the "Black Market."

Writing to R. H. Suhr, butcher in Lewistown, Minn., Andresen gives this pointed advice:

"Speaking confidentially, I think that if I were running a butcher shop, I would make every effort to get meat from local sources irrespective of some of the unjust and unfair rulings."

In Washington, this is interpreted as meaning just one thing: advice to deal with the "Black Market." Coming from a member of congress supposed to uphold the laws of the land and help create respect for government, Mr. Andresen's letter is considered unusual, to say the least.

Conference Problems.

THE Churchill-Roosevelt conference in Canada boils down to one main thing—will Great Britain use the army she has been training in England, plus whatever U. S. troops may be there, to launch a second front across the channel in France?

To understand this question fully and to understand what Churchill and Roosevelt face, it is necessary to know the background of what has been going on (1) with Russia, (2) at Casablanca, (3) at the May-June conference between the president and the prime minister. Here is my own personal diagnosis of what has taken place regarding each:

1. Russia. As everyone knows, Russia has been asking the United States and Britain repeatedly for a second front in France. Each time we have sidestepped. In June 1942 when Foreign Minister Molotoff came to Washington we told him the United States had only just come into the war and wasn't ready. Molotoff sympathized. He had pointed out that Britain had a large army in England. We had to reply that the United States could not dictate what Britain did with her troops.

Several times since then Russia has asked us for a second front in France. We have given different excuses: that we were setting up a front in North Africa, that we were beginning operations in Sicily, that a second front across the channel would cost terrific casualties. To the latter Russia has replied:

"Of course it would cost casualties, but what do you think we have been doing, attending a tea party? This is war, we have lost more than four million men."

So last week, as the tide of victory began to turn decisively in favor of the Allies, Stalin gently reminded us through "Pravda," his controlled newspaper, that we had not yet started a second front, that Churchill and Roosevelt had both violated their Casablanca promises for a second front, and implied that since we hadn't done much fighting, Russia intended to write the terms of peace. This is one big phase of the problem Roosevelt and Churchill face in Canada.

Casablanca Decision.

THE SECOND phase of this personal diagnosis is my opinion of what happened at Casablanca. There all sides agreed in principle on a second front in France, but when it came down to practice the moot point arose as to what proportion of British troops, what proportion of American troops should make up the invasion army.

Churchill has always opposed a mass sacrifice of British manpower, has pointed to the cream of British youth lost in the last war. Has diplomatically suggested that American manpower, with a population of 130,000,000 was much greater than Britain's 30,000,000.

Heavy British losses, he has reasoned, would set England back a whole generation. Therefore, Churchill at Casablanca undoubtedly wanted the invasion army to be about 70 per cent American troops, 30 per cent British, subject to shipping U. S. troops to England in large enough quantities. Roosevelt probably agreed. However, the submarine situation all last winter was not as favorable as today, so obviously it was impossible to ship all the troops we wanted to England.

Second Front—Where?

THE THIRD chapter came during the May-June conference between Roosevelt and Churchill. By this time we had all of North Africa and had to decide whether to push ahead with a second front in the Mediterranean or a second front in France. If in France, it would be necessary for the Allies to use a larger proportion of British troops than American. Because we had not been able to ship enough to England, probably the ratio, instead of being 70 per cent American and 30 per cent British, would have been nearer 30 per cent American and 70 per cent British.

Another vital factor also entered the June picture. Until then, the Allies had not had sufficient bomber strength in England to really punish enemy industry. We were just beginning to go to town. So, after prolonged debates, the Churchill thesis finally was adopted—striking at the "soft underbelly of the Axis" through the Mediterranean islands and waiting for an invasion through France until (1) we could really blast Germany from the air and (2) build up U. S. troop reserves in England.

U. S. war chiefs have never been too enthusiastic about the "soft under-belly" approach. They think it nibbling at the fringes of the enemy instead of striking at the heart. However, they probably underestimated one thing—the political repercussions of the Mediterranean invasion.

Churchill, the politician, knew better than the military what the effect would be overrunning Sicily. Not only has this action been reverberating, but the advances to date have been much greater than anyone estimated. Churchill has talked about invasion when the leaves fall. Today the Allies are far ahead of schedule.

That is reason No. 1 for the Churchill-Roosevelt meeting. A new course of action must be charted. Reason No. 2 is the desirability at last of meeting the demands of Russia on opening a front in France.

Several things have happened since June. The political morale of the Axis is shattered. Its industry, thanks to Allied air power, is also shattered. It might be possible to win a victory by continued air pounding without the loss of lives from old-fashioned land warfare, or on the other hand the moment may have arrived for a land invasion which will tip the scales and bring victory in Europe this winter.

These are the difficult decisions awaiting the president and the prime minister.

ERNIE PYLE Roving Reporter

This Will Give You a Clear Idea Of the Great Need for Blood Plasma.

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—Army ambulances carry four stretchers each, or nine sitting wounded. When they reach a clearing station they back up to the surgical tent and unload.

The men lie on their stretchers on the floor of the tent while the aid men look at their tags to see how severe the wounds are, in order to handle the worst ones first. Those who don't need further attention are carried right on through to the ward tents to wait for the next ambulance on back to a hospital.

Those who have graver wounds are carried into the operating room. Two big army trunks sit up-ended there on the dirt floor. The trunks contain all kinds of surgical supplies in drawers. On top of each trunk is fastened a steel rods which curves up at each end. The wounded man is carried in his litter and set on these two trunks. The curved rods keep him from sliding off. His litter thus forms his operating table.

A portable surgical lamp stands in a tripod over the wounded man. A little motor and generator outside the tent furnish power, but usually they just use flashlights. One or two surgeons in coveralls or ordinary uniform bend over the man and remove his dressings.

Medical-aid men crowd around behind them, handing them compresses or bandages with steel forceps from a sterile cabinet.

Other aid men give the patient another shot of morphine or inject blood plasma or give him a drink of water from a tin cup through a rubber tube they put in his mouth.

Incidentally, one of the duties of the surgical ward boys is to keep the sweat wiped off the surgeon's face so it won't drop down onto the wound.

JUST OUTSIDE the surgical tent is a small trench filled with bloody shirt sleeves and pant legs the surgeons have snipped off wounded men in order to get at the wounds more quickly. The surgeons re-dress the wounds, and sprinkle on sulfanilamide as though it were ant powder. Sometimes they poke for buried shrapnel, or recompress broken arteries to stop the flow of blood, or inject plasma if the patient is turning pale.

They don't give general anesthetics here. Occasionally they give a local, but usually the wounded man is so doped up with morphine by the time he reaches here he doesn't feel much pain. The surgeons believe in using lots of morphine. It spares a man so much pain and, consequently relieves the general shock to his system.

On my third day at the clearing station, when I was beginning to feel better, I spent most of my time around this operating table. As they would undress each new wound I held firmly to a lamp bracket above my head, for I was still weak and I didn't want to disgrace myself by suddenly keeling over at the sight of a bad wound.

Many of the wounds were hard to look at, and yet Lieut. Michael de Giorgio said he had never seen a human body as badly smashed up here as he had in traffic accidents back in New York, where he practiced.

One stalwart fellow had caught a machine-gun bullet right alongside his nose. It had made a small clean hole and gone clear through his cheek, leaving a larger hole just beneath his ear as it came out. It gave you the willies to look at it, yet the doctors said it wasn't serious at all and would heal with no bad effects.

The nerviest fellow I saw had two big holes in his back. You could have put your whole hand in either one of them. As the surgeons worked on him he lay on his stomach and talked a blue streak.

"I killed five of the ——— with a hand grenade just before they got me," he said. "What made me so damn mad was that I was just out of reach of my rifle and couldn't crawl over to it, or I'd a got five more of them. Jeez, I'm hungry! I ain't had nothing to eat since yesterday morning."

BUT MOST of the wounded say nothing at all when brought in—either because they see no acquaintances to talk to, or because they're too weak from their wounds or too dopey from morphine. Of the hundreds that passed through while I was there I never heard but one man groaning with pain.

Another thing that struck me as the wounded came through in a ceaseless stream on their stretchers was how dirt and exhaustion reduces human faces to such a common denominator. It got so everybody they carried in looked alike. The only break in the procession of tired and dirty men who all looked exactly alike would be when an extreme blond would be carried in. His light hair would seem like a flower in a row of weeds.
